HARDING FUNERAL PLANS ARE COMPLETED

The WEEK

By A. M. BRAYTON

"PRESIDENT HARDING is dead," is the message that was broadasted from the Palace hotel at San Francisco at 10 o'clock Thursday night. "President Coolidge starts for Washington," a telegraphic bulletin announces at dawn Thursday morning.

"The king is dead—long live the king."

Vice-president Coolidge took the presidential oath and became president of the United States at 2:47 Friday morning, eight hours and 47 minutes after the death of President Harding.

There is one adventure that comes to all alike, whether president or commoner, king or serf. President Harding has met that adventure. Who now knows his state of being?

No doubt it is a happy one, for President Harding was a truly religious man. America will recall with satisfaction that his last speech was a plea for more religion and better religion. There is before us a sad picture of death and the brave figure of the heroic woman who, barely recovered from a serious breakdown, faced with calm fortitude this tragic crisis of her life. Government ceases actively to function. Sports are abandoned. Chambers of commerce debate the day to transmit reflection. Foreign governments go into mourning. Statesmen pay tribute. Half-masted flags around the world tell of the shock that comes when death lays hold of one big in human affairs. Out of it comes no striking thing. There are many political issues in America. The president was interested in many of them. But everywhere one issue was pointed to because of its interruption. It is international co-operation for peace. America's leader in the fight for the world court is gone. What will become of it? Lloyd George wonders. President Cuno wonders. President Poincare wonders. We Americans wonder, and some of us dare still to hope.

* * * *

Human interest moves rapidly, compelled by human emergencies. While the president lies in state, millions are asking who will be his successor as the republican presidential nominee of 1924. Coolidge, elevated by chance to the presidency, is mentioned. When Theodore Roosevelt became president through the death of William McKinley, he finished out his first term in pursuit of the McKinley policies. President Coolidge announces that he will follow the Harding policies. Roosevelt subsequently won the presidential nomination and election. Then he became his own man as president in many things radically different from McKinley. Probably President Coolidge would not veer far from the Harding policies were he elected president in 1924, for he is not less conservative than his predecessor.

* * * *

Among the liberals to whom the republican party may turn in an effort to win the next presidential election, thus throwing off some of its conservatism, are Kenyon, Johnson, Borah, Hoover, La Follette and Lenroot. Of all these, Senator La Follette will wield the greatest individual power, but his is the slimmest chance of nomination. He can weld together forces that may produce a liberal platform and force a liberal nomination, but it can not be his own. There is enough conservative influence left to block any one man, and that influence will make blocking La Follette its first business.

Probably no man would have a better chance for the nomination than Senator Irvine L. Lenroot could he get the Wisconsin delegation. But with Senator La Follette fighting for that delegation and hostile to Senator Lenroot this chance seems small, and it is improbable that the junior senator would encounter the conflict. Too bad that Wisconsin's first real opportunity to name a president is thus blocked.

Probably Hoover and Johnson are the next strongest candidates, Hoover the abler, Johnson the greater political strategist. Great in many particulars, the silent, moody Borah seems a tail-ender.

The French reply to Great Britain on the German situation was a flat rejection of all points. In a sense it left the English premier in a blind alley, because it was constituted wholly of questions, rather than of statements.

It is announced that Great Britain will seek the consent of the powers to make public the entire correspondence, and thus let the world judge. The French will dislike this, but should they refuse their consent they would be confessing judgment.

The British policy seems to be to make a separate treaty with Germany should British public sentiment sustain the government after the publication of the diplomatic exchanges. Germany is trying to forestall this action on the part of England. President Cuno does not want France to stand alone, feeling that with a free hand and no support French policy may take the form of absolute seizure of Germany.

COOLIDGE MAY FIGHT STRIKE IN HARD COAL

Expected to be Strong for Economy and to Oppose the Soldier Bonus Measure

WON'T APPROVE RADICAL RAILROAD LEGISLATION

Politicians Exhume His Speeches to Find Attitude on Big Questions

BY HARDEN COLFAX
Special correspondent of the Tribune

WASHINGTON.—Advocates of nation-wide strikes, higher taxation, and radical legislation, and general disturbers of business conditions will find in the new occupant of the white house a man schooled in the principles of law observance and order at all costs, economy in government administration, and stabilization of industry and commerce.

Cursory examination of the new president's political utterances in the past lead Washington observers to the following opinions:

First, that there will be no anthracite coal strike if the president can avert it; but if a strike should come, the situation will be met with firmness reminiscent of the days of Theodore Roosevelt.

Second, that the late President Harding's policy of reducing governmental expenditures and of having the government pay as it goes will be followed to the letter. Proponents of the soldier bonus and other legislation making large demands upon the treasury in addition to the regular budget are likely to find little sympathy at the white house.

Third, that there will be no radical railroad legislation, proposed in some quarters, at the next session of congress, except over a presidential veto.

Recall Addresses

In support of these conclusions there are cited numerous extracts from the public speeches and papers of Calvin Coolidge when he was governor of Massachusetts, among them being his Labor day address at Plymouth, September 1, 1919, in which he said:

"The great outstanding fact in the economic life of America is that the wealth of the nation is owned by the people of the nation. The stockholders of great corporations run into the hundreds of thousands, the small tradesmen, the thrifty householders, the tillers of the soil, the depositors in savings banks, and the owners of government bonds, make the number that includes nearly our entire people.

"The great aim of our government is to protect the weak—to aid them to become strong. How can our people be made strong? Only as they draw strength from our industries. How can they do that? Only by building up our industries and making them strong. This is fundamental. It is the place to begin. These are the instruments of all our achievement. When they fail, all fails. When they prosper, all prosper. Workmen's compensation, hours and conditions of labor, are cold consolations if there be no employment. And employment can be had only if someone finds it profitable. The greater the profit, the greater the wages.

Taxes from Surplus

"Taxes must be measured by ability to meet them out of surplus income. Industry must expand or fail. It must show a surplus after all payments of wages, taxes and returns to investors. Conscription can call once; then all is over."

Those hopeful of an era of free public spending or the expenditures of large funds from the national treasury to benefit certain classes of recipients, including proponents of soldiers' bonus, are finding little comfort from Mr. Coolidge's message to the Massachusetts legislature, in the early spring of 1919, returning House bill number 1629 without his approval. In the document accompanying the vetoed bill, Governor Coolidge said:

"This bill raises salaries of members of the general court from $1,000 to $1,500 and is retroactive. It is necessary to decide whether the commonwealth can well afford this additional tax and whether any public benefit would accrue from it. These are times that require careful scrutiny of public expenditure. Burden of taxes resulting from war is heavy. The addition of $142,000 to the expenditures of the commonwealth in

COOLIDGE PLANS NO CHANGES IN OFFICIAL FAMILY

Makes Known His Desire to Have Cabinet Members Remain to Assist Him

WILLARD HOTEL BECOMES CENTER OF GOVERNMENT

New President Signs His First Proclamation on Funeral

WASHINGTON, D. C.—By The Associated Press.—President Coolidge today put his shoulder under the burden of government and made ready to carry on along the pathway pointed out by President Harding.

His second day as president was occupied with a long succession of official conferences in which he gained an initial grasp of his duties and responsibilities and made final plans for the state funeral of his predecessor. He signed the name of Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States, for the first time to a proclamation announcing the passing of Mr. Harding and calling upon the nation to observe next Friday as a day of mourning and prayer.

Cabinet Members Call

Affairs of state were taken up with several cabinet members, undersecretaries and others. Among those who called at the temporary executive offices in the Willard hotel were Secretary Hughes, Postmaster General New, Secretary Denby, the acting secretaries of war, treasury and labor; Director Lord of the budget bureau, and Director Hines of the veterans bureau.

The condition of the various federal agencies was discussed in connection with the problems of the early future.

Announcements of policy were withheld by the president, nor would he indicate tonight whether he had in mind an extra session of congress.

"Everything stands as it is," he said to newspaper correspondents, "until you are notified to the contrary."

Plans No Changes

This statement applied also to the cabinet personnel, and it was learned later that the president hoped the present cabinet members would not only remain to assist him, but would refrain from presenting even their customary formal resignations. This hope he is said to have expressed personally to all the cabinet officers now in Washington.

In addition to his talks with department and bureau chiefs, Mr. Coolidge was engaged throughout the day in conferences with Col. Clarence Sherrill, white house military aide, regarding plans for the funeral of President Harding. In mourning for his predecessor he wore a wide band of crepe on the sleeve of his grey suit.

There was only one respite from the overflowing duties of his second day as national executive. About 2 o'clock he left his hotel suite for a half hour to make a flying visit, possibly his last, to the office he occupied as vice president in the senate office building. He was bombarded by photographers outside and inside his office and spent a few minutes gathering personal effects from his desk and closets.

Workers Swarm In

That the hotel will be the center of the government for several days was definitely established today. The presidential suite, originally only of four rooms, was enlarged by additions up and down the hall, and white house clerks and stenographers swarmed in to handle the flood of telegrams, mail and other business.

Emergency telephone and electric wires were strung up temporarily on the carpets and along the walls, and the whole Coolidge administration was put actively into motion while inside and outside of the hotel crowds of curious spectators stood for hours in an effort to secure a glimpse of the new president.

After the last two days of strenuous activity, however, the first Sabbath in the presidency promises to be comparatively quiet for Mr. Coolidge. With Mrs. Coolidge, he will attend church in the morning and in the afternoon will rest or possibly take an automobile ride.

DEAREST OF ALL HIS POLICIES TO PRESIDENT HARDING

Predicted Coolidge Will Find Senate Even Harder to Handle than Predecessor

BY ROBERT T. SMALL
(Copyright, 1923.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Coolidge already sees the legislative rocks that lie ahead of him in his announced purpose of forwarding wherever possible the policies of the preceding administration.

Robert T. Small.

President Coolidge knows that he has the same senatorial situation to deal with that confronted President Harding. If anything, he knows the senate situation better than Mr. Harding did, for Mr. Coolidge has had to sit in the senate the past two years, and has had to listen to the cloakroom declarations of defiance to anything that might emanate from the White House.

For this reason it would seem that those advocates of a more liberal participating foreign policy on the part of the United States, who have gathered hope from a perusal of Mr. Coolidge's friendly utterances concerning the league of nations and the entry of this country into the world court, are reckoning without the senate hosts who have shown in the past their ability to play havoc with any foreign policy which does not come up to their own particular requirements.

Held League Friend

If the senate was determined to veto America's entry into the world court despite Mr. Harding's statement that he was unalterably opposed to the league of nations, with no desire to enter it "by the side door, the back door or the cellar door," there is small chance of the proposals being better received from a man whose public utterances have been anything but unfriendly to the league.

That Mr. Coolidge will submit the world court proposal to the senate soon after it convenes in December is of course accepted here. The world court was the outstanding policy of the Harding administration in its later days. The president died with a plea for the court but a few moments from his lips. If he left a single lighted torch to be caught up and borne on high by his successor it was the duty of America to enter the court and take up her share of the world burdens. To Mr. Harding the world court plan was the fulfillment of the promises he made during the campaign that he would place the United States in an association of nations. The court more nearly met his ideas of an association than did the league. He characterized the court as a thing of law; the league as a thing of war.

His Chief Policy

Unquestionably if he could have left a single direction to his successor, it would have been to press for the world court until all hope of success in the senate was gone. When he left Washington Mr. Harding said that he would be content with presenting the case of the world court to the people but would not attempt to force it through the senate. As the trip proceeded, however, and as he saw the enthusiasm with which the court plan was everywhere welcomed, Mr. Harding became stronger and stronger in his belief in the plan and had determined to fight it out with the senate as he had never fought before.

Mr. Harding had decided that even if the managers of his party were opposed to pressing the world court issue, he would disregard their admonitions and go ahead according to his own lights. How President Coolidge will feel that he is compelled to go against the wishes of his party associates, only time will tell. He will as usual keep his own counsel.

Senate Out of Control

President Coolidge unquestionably has inherited a recalcitrant senate. It was conceded weeks ago that the next eighteen months of the Harding administration would be tumultuous ones. It was agreed that only with the help of some friendly democrats could anything like an administration program be put through. The republican majority in the senate has all but faded from view. It disappears entirely when the republicans who are "off the reservation" are taken into account. And these republicans will be just as much "off" under the Coolidge regime in the White House as they promised to be under Mr. Hard-

DIGNITY AND SIMPLICITY TO MARK SERVICES

Body of Late President Will Lie in State in Rotunda of the Capitol on Wednesday Afternoon

SEVERAL THOUSAND TROOPS TO ESCORT BODY TO TRAIN

Imposing Turnout to Mark Procession With School Children Laying Carpet of Flowers

WASHINGTON D. C.—By The Associated Press. — The national capital, in sorrow and mourning, symbolic of that of the nation, went forward today with the preparations to receive and pay a last tribute to the dead president.

A state funeral, to be marked by a solemn dignity and simplicity, was arranged for by President Coolidge and other high officials, who devoted themselves untiringly to the preparation of ceremonials that will fittingly express the grief and reverence of the American people.

President Coolidge, Chief Justice Taft, members of the cabinet and of congress and others high in government councils will participate in the ceremonies. At the suggestion of Mr. Coolidge, Woodrow Wilson was invited to take part, but after a conference between Lieutenant Colonel Sherrill, aide to the chief executive and Rear Admiral Grayson, Mr. Wilson's physician, it was announced that because of the condition of his health, the former president regretted he would be unable to participate.

Coolidge to Meet Train

Upon its arrival from San Francisco Tuesday, the funeral train will be met by Mr. Colidge and other ranking officials who will accompany the body to the white house behind the escort of a squadron of cavalry and a battalion of field artillery. It will then lie in the east room until Wednesday.

Whether there will be private services at the white house will depend on the wishes of Mrs. Harding.

Wednesday morning the body will be escorted to the capitol and placed in the rotunda. After funeral services there it will lie in state until 6 p. m. and an hour later will start on the last journey to Marion where, on Friday it will find a resting place.

Escort of Troops

As the flag draped casket moves from the white house over Pennsylvania avenue it will be escorted by several thousand troops under General John J. Pershing, and behind the automobiles carrying Mrs. Harding and members of the family will be President Coolidge, members of his cabinet, members of the supreme court and senators and representativestive groups of patriotic organizations, headed by their respective commanders with colors and uniforms, as well as many civic and commercial organiations.

The Masonic orders of which Mr. Harding was a member, will be represented by 150 Knights Templars and representatives of the grand lodge and there also will be small groups from other fraternal organiations.

Carpet of Flowers

As the funeral cortege moves from the white house, ten thousand Washington school children will lay down a carpet of flowers for the caisson bearing the casket and a children's chorus, recruited from the city's playgrounds will sing the favorite hymns of Mr. Harding. Pennsylvania avenue will be roped off from the white house to the capitol and cleared of all traffic. Cordons of police will line the broad thoroughfare where it is estimated more than 100,000 will gather to view the procession.

After the simple services in the rotunda, the public will be admitted for a last view of the dead. They will march in from the east entrance four abreast, but reaching the heir the line will separate passing two abreast to either side. There will be a guard of honor at the casket and the lines will be kept in continuous motion.

Basing their estimates on similar events in the past, the police have reckoned that the number who would view the body from 10:30 a. m. to 6 p. m. will exceed 100,000.

Military Escort to Train

When the doors have been closed, the body will be taken to the union station with a military escort and placed aboard the train. President Coolidge and many other government officers will accompany it to Marion.

The funeral train will reach Marion Thursday morning and there it again will be met by a military escort. Final arrangements for the ceremonial there have not been completed, but

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

To the People of the City of La Crosse:

As Mayor of the City of La Crosse, therefore, I hereby dedicate Friday, August 10, in the city of La Crosse, to the memory of President Harding, directing that the city hall and all public offices be closed upon that day, that the flags displayed in all public places be carried at half-mast, and that all citizens cease from their usual occupations insofar as possible to pay the last tribute of affectionate respect to the memory of the late president.

RADIO AMATEURS OF CITY WILL ATTEND CHICAGO MEETING

Three Delegates to Represent La Crosse at American Radio Relay League Conclave

LOCAL OPERATORS OFFICERS OF LEAGUE IN THIS STATE

Ben Ott, Ed Benton and A. D. Sanial Among Leaders

BEN OTT, Ed Benton and Waldo Grover, amateur radio station operators, will attend the second annual convention of the National American Radio Relay league, Sept. 12-15, in Chicago. Approximately 1,500 persons, representing all lines of radio activity, ranging from amateurs and experimenters to technical men connected with the radio industry as well as authorities of international repute will attend the convention. The convention is under the auspices of the Chicago Radio Traffic association.

One of the most important meetings at the convention on Thursday afternoon will be that of the A. R. R. L. Traffic Department under the chairmanship of F. H. Schnell, traffic manager of the League, when coming international amateur long distance tests and kindred matters will be discussed at length.

Technical Meeting at Night

The evening will be given over to a technical meeting at which time both amateur and broadcast transmitters will be discussed. Tours will be made to local broadcast and amateur stations the following afternoon. Next is another technical meeting on the general subject "receiving apparatus." Saturday is to be a "night of mystery" and the convention will wind up with the initiation of candidates into the "Royal Order of the Wouff-Hong."

The American Radio Relay league is the outgrowth of radio clubs and associations of amateur radio clubs which had their origin about 10 years ago. The A. R. R. L. owns and publishes the "QST" every month, its official magazine. The student of radio will find it a practical help, nothing visionary in it. Subscribers to this magazine automatically become members of the A. R. R. L. This organization always represents the amateur in legislative hearing at Washington. The substantial prestige of this body is largely due to its non-professional nature, its non-commercialism and what it has done to advance radio. The broadcasting features which are so widely enjoyed today are the direct re-

KIWANIANS WILL STORM EAU CLAIRE AT STATE MEETING

La Crosse to Send Large Delegation to Annual Convention of the Club

FIFTY PLANNING TO LEAVE IN AUTOMOBILES ON MONDAY

Several Feature Stunts Outlined by La Crosse Live Wires

THE SONG LA CROSSE KIWANIANS WILL SING
LA CROSSE SMILES SONG
(Tune: Smiles)

There are smiles in dear old Eau Claire,
There are smiles in Madison,
And you'll find them down in dear old Sparta.
And in every part of Wis-con-sin;
There are miles of smiles in Manitowoc,
And in Marinette and Milwaukee,
But the smiles they smile in dear old La Crosse,
Are the smiles that look best to me.

Twenty-five automobiles carrying about fifty La Crosse Kiwanians and guests will leave the city early Monday morning to attend the district convention of Kiwanis clubs to be held at Eau Claire August 6th and 7th.

The La Crosse delegation will be much in evidence at the convention. Charles Cone, past president of the La Crosse club, and present lieutenant governor of this district, which comprises about thirty-five cities in Wisconsin and upper Michigan, will preside at one of the big sessions. He will also preside at the district luncheon Monday noon to be held at the Eau Claire hotel, and the La Crosse delegation has prepared numerous stunts for this occasion. Among other things the La Crosse delegation will offer as prizes valuable articles that are made and jobbed in La Crosse. Rubber boots, shoes, dresses, candy, automobile lubricating oil, automobile accessories and similar articles, including a business college scholarship, will be given to the lucky Kiwanians.

"The most important features of this or any Kiwanis convention," said W. M. Dvorak, secretary of the local club, "are the business sessions. There are more than one thousand clubs in the United States and Canada, due mainly to the fact that Kiwanis is striving successfully to accomplish something worth while. At this district convention the policies fathered by the international organization, will be emphasized. These policies have to do with the intensification of the service of all clubs in behalf of under-privileged children; with the fostering of better relations between the farmer and the city man; with the aggressive development of the spirit of co-operation and co-ordination of civic activities in relation to organizations of similar kind, and with the fostering of a patriotic citizenship."

The following Kiwanians will attend the convention:

Hank Sjolander, chairman of the Onalaska-Eau Claire committee; Charlie Calloway, Harry Leithold, Harold Brown, Guilford Wiley, Ted Schultz, S. H. Russell, Gus Boerner, Chas. Cone, Wilbur Holcomb, H. E. Bruce, Ed Erickson, Sam Hyde, J. A. Kaeppler, John Mulder, Bill Smale, Joe Smith, Ernest Spicer, Lyle Clark, L. H. White, Wenz Dvorak, Joe Hambuechen, Lee Motl, J. R. Johnson, John Hofreeber, Bill Orton, Oscar Lundgren, W. C. Johnson, Dr. Dean Crowell, Dr. Clay Evenson, Otto Merman, E. S. Mottram, A. R. Nelson, Geo. Rose, Ole Elbertson, Al Heyer, A. C. FIVE THOUSAND IS PENSION FOR MRS. HARDING

WASHINGTON, D. C.—If precedents are followed, Mrs. Warren G. Harding will receive a life pension of $5,000 a year from the government.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt were given the annuities by vote of congress, members of which said Saturday that was little doubt of similar action in Mrs. Harding's case.

PRESIDENT TAKES RIDE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—By The Associated Press. — President and Mrs. Coolidge went for an hour's automobile ride tonight accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Stearns of Boston.

LEON TROTZKY, NOW RULING RUSSIA, HAS NO NEED FOR CLOCK

With Lenine's Illness Foremost Figure in Soviet, Pays No Attention to 8-Hour Day

MOSCOW.—By The Associated Press.—Since Premier Lenin became seriously ill, Leon Trotzky, soviet Russia's war commissar, has become the foremost figure in the soviet government. He has no working day. Every workman, laborer, or employe in soviet Russia has an 8-hour working day conspicuously looked after by the Trade Union council and guarded by the Labor Code. But Trotzky has none. His working day is much over eight hours and as regards time, day and night are treated alike.

Trotzky begins his day with the newspapers. They serve him as a means of every day human connection and business information. He reads them just as he would listen to a report by one of his officers and very often the newspaper information is followed by quick interpretations and action.

Very often a news telegram, a reporter's item, or a quite uninteresting interview paves the road for an important decision. Then at various times during the day and night, Trotzky reads and dictates.

He always reads with a pencil in hand, which he holds like a surgeon holds his instrument. He underlines, annotates, numbers the author's thoughts, associates them, makes polemical notes—and the book returns from his anatomical desk like an embalmed corpse.

He dictates queries, resolutions, departmental instructions and advices, orders, articles, pamphlets, brochures, friendly and sarcastic letters, replies, reminiscences—short and long ones, dry and fierce, always bright and stylishly polished. Everything clear, exact and business-like.

A detachment of cyclists and motorcyclists, day and night, carry all over Moscow with war-time speed this state business literature of the war commissar.

During the day, the quiet of his cabinet is besieged by telephone calls. In this way which Trotzky values as an economic means of communication, he disposes of half his work.

In his work, Trotzky does only what he himself must and can do, everything else being completed by other—his assistants. He writes an article, others—librarians—will find for him the necessary quotations from Marx or any other writer, as the case may be.

Trotzky's office is a combination of simple but mighty things; stenographers, telephone switchboards and a good automobile—everything which curtails movement and serves to economize energy. He rests by passing from one work to another or indulging in sports, when feeling very tired. His favorite sports are hunting, fishing, croquet and chess.

INJURED BY PAPER REEL

MENOMONEE, Mich. — Edward Boucher had a narrow escape from serious injury at the Hoskins-Morainville paper mill when he was struck a glancing blow by a heavy paper reel, one end of which fell from its position on the machine upon which Boucher was working.

WHAT WAS YOUR FIRST JOB?

La Crosse Business Men and Women Tell of their Experiences When they First Went to Work

The second installment of interviews with La Crosse business men and women on their experiences when they "tackled" their first job and what the work was like, is presented herewith.

Val Keppel of Holmen, supervisor, farmer, creamery executive—All of my boyhood days were spent on my father's farm and which I later took over. I did not receive any regular, stated amount of pay. All the money from the farm went into a pool, as it were, and we were all taken care of. I guess the first job I ever had for which I received a wage or salary, was that of enumerator in the census of 1890.

Sam Johnson, policeman—I was born in La Crosse. When I was nine years old a relative of the family, a farmer, came to town with his family and all his belongings on a team hauled by a yoke of oxen. I hired out to him for my board and I started in driving that ox team. We headed for Bostwick Valley and then Dutch creek. I drove them all the way. And believe me those oxen surely could pull that load. After about five years on the farm, during which time I received only my board and clothes I came back to La Crosse and went to work in Colman's mill. I got $3 a week at the start. The first thing they put me at was pulling lathes. I stayed at that until one day a lathe hit me in the neck and nearly knocked my head off. I got other work in the mill after that.

Mrs. F. E. Withrow — I got my first job when I was 18 years old. I substituted for Mrs. O'Connor who was the stenographer in the office of her husband, J. S. O'Connor when he was agent for the Champion binder. The office was down where Homer Hart has his place of business now. I was on that job two months, then I became stenographer in the law office of Judge E. C. Higbee, who was practicing law at that time. I have worked in law offices ever since.

Fritz Krause, Rivoli building elevator operator—My first job was in my father's cooperage in Madgeburg, Germany. I worked for my father from my earliest recollection until I was 20 years old. Then I came to America and started in making barrels in this country. Now, I wasn't worried much about money when I worked for my father. I don't recall getting any regular wages.

Fred Leitheld, music dealer—When I was a boy I worked for my father on his farm in Iowa. I also was sent to Upper Iowa university, at Fayette. Then I went to work for my brothers who had a general store at Postville. My first real job was when I went to St. Paul. I had decided to start out for myself so I went north looking for any opportunity to go to work or enter business. In St. Paul I met two young men whom I knew in Iowa. They had a grocery store and market. I went to work for them as a bookkeeper but it was the toughest bookkeeping job I ever heard of. I had to get up at 4:30 in the morning and feed and tend the horses used in the draying department. Then I had to get the teamster up and he was a hard fellow to arouse. But he had to be stirred up and sent to the market place so he could get the things the farmers brought in. They didn't have any creameries in those days like they have now and we used to get our butter from various farmers. I worked up a butter route among the wealthy people of the city. That was another of my duties and in between times I kept their books. After a few months of that, I decided to move on and I came down the river to La Crosse where I settled. I began my career in the music business, tuning pianos.

W. H. Shafer, C. M. & St. P. passenger conductor—My first job was in N. B. Holway's lumber mill. I was 13 years old when I started. First I pulled laths from the lath cutter. That was a tough job. You had to count the good laths and throw them to one side and you also had to throw away the edging. Next I went to work on the jackway. I was then getting a dollar a day. I used to run up and down the timbers on the side of the jackway and Mr. Holway would frequently sit on a log near the water watching Frank Howard and I shoot the logs to the jack. One day Mr. Holway fell in the river. He wore a full beard, Prince Albert coat and high leather boots. It was a funny sight to see that big beard and Prince Albert floating in the water. We saved him, of course. We hauled him to one of the logs and yelled for help, as he was too heavy for us to pull out. Terence McCauley and George Keyes answered our call and pulled Mr. Holway out. That Saturday night Howard and I got a $10 gold piece in our pay envelopes. The following week we learned that our pay had been raised 50 cents a day, so I got $3.50 a day and Howard $2. He was older than I was and was getting more pay.

J. E. Keizer, assessor of incomes—The first job for which I received money when a boy was driving cattle into Onalaska and La Crosse. My parents had a country inn on the old Black River Falls road. It was called the Nine Mile House and cattle buyers would stop at the hotel. We would get 10, 15 and 25 cents for driving the cattle to the city. I remember driving many in for Leonard Frey, brother of Jacob. The next money I got was from my father who paid me 10 cents each for all gophers I trapped.

John Brindley, lawyer and judge—I never worked for anybody in my life, that is as a hired man or employe. I always worked on my father's farm when I was small. I drove two yoke of oxen when I was nine years old. We were breaking ground on the farm. Later I drove for some of the neighbors, using our own oxen. I have driven as many as five yoke of oxen, while a hired man would guide the plow. It would keep me pretty busy running from one end of the line to the other keeping all the oxen going. You know they would hold back if they got a chance.

W. F. Adams, merchant—When I was 13 years old I decided I was going to quit school and go to work. Finally the day came when I was to make the big plunge into the business world. We were living in Chicago. My mother saw an ad in a paper for a boy to make himself handy around a large wholesale clothing house. She took me there and I got the job. It paid $2 a week. With my first week's pay I bought my first pair of long trousers to work in. They cost just $3. I worked at this wholesale house from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. We lived about five miles from the center of town and I either had to walk or get rides on wagons. I couldn't afford to spend 60 cents a week out of $3 on carfare. After two weeks on that job I quit and entered the employment of a large shoe store. That was the beginning of my career in my chosen line of work.

Henry Lueth, circuit court bailiff, county surveyor—In the fall of the year I was 12½ years old, I was playing with my brother Edward in the hole that had been dug for a cellar of a house at Tenth and Pine streets. He had done something that I didn't like and I slapped him. He cried and my mother appeared with a stick in her hand and threatened to whip me when I got home. I didn't go home that night, in fact it was seven years before I went home and then only stayed a half hour and was gone again. Well, that particular night I started down town. I met George Loomis, a farmer near West Salem. He offered me a job on his farm. I went along with him and worked on his farm for seven years. He paid me $5 a month and my board. It was in November when I ran away from home but I was still in my bare feet. When I got to Loomis' farm my feet were frost bitten but Mrs. Loomis bathed my feet in cold water and they soon were all right. After that I worked in the sawmills in La Crosse, on the river and in the woods. I was a foreman in the woods for 32 years.

J. E. Heraty, physician and surgeon—I worked on my father's farm near Fond du Lac when I was a boy; worked for my father, in fact, all the time I went to the grade school, high school and business school. The first job for which I got real money was my first vacation after I went to Marquette college. I was a census enumerator in two townships near Fond du Lac for the 1900 federal census.

Anton Linker, florist—My first job was working in the fields of my uncle's nursery at Giessen, Germany. When I was 12 years old I went to work with field hands who were grafting roses. I learned how to graft roses then but I couldn't do it today. I have forgotten the art I learned when a mere boy. No, I didn't get any pay when I was a boy but I was busy learning the florist's profession which was much better than mere pay.

H. O. Williams, coal dealer—My boyhood was spent at Cedar Falls, Iowa. My first job was in my father's overall factory. I knew the overall business from soup to nuts. It wasn't until a number of years afterwards that I drifted into the coal business.

OFFERS TO SHAKE DICE FOR STOLEN TROUSERS

RACINE, Wis.—A thief stole a pair of trousers from Theodore D. Bright and the victim is now willing to shake dice to see whether the coat and vest will go with the trousers. The upper garments now are useless to him, Bright said in announcing his offer. He insists that no questions will be asked, that he only desires a sporting chance of recovering his missing apparel.

President Coolidge

THE obscurity which enshrouds vice presidents leaves the country, at least this part of the country, very much in the dark as to what it may expect from President Coolidge. Perhaps farther east, in New England whence he rose to national prominence, they may know him better. But in the Mississippi Valley we can remember to have heard about Mr. Coolidge, chiefly, that he was connected with the breaking of the Boston police strike, and that he is said to be the perfect type of rock-ribbed New England republican.

It is not illuminating information, this. Republicans, even New England republicans, are not all cast in the same mould. There is a governor of Maine, for instance, who recently startled New England by half-masting the capitol flag in respect to the memory of his pet dog. There are Senator Moses and Senator Lodge, both New England republicans, and vastly differing in character and type. Probably republicanism in New England follows a general pattern more closely than in most other sections, but it is there subject, none the less, to the individual variations which in the more pronounced and extreme west and northwest make republicanism almost indefinable. In general we may glean that President Coolidge is conservative, and a believer in delegated, representative government rather than direct control by the people.

The police strike incident is of even less value in estimating the quality of the new president. As governor Mr. Coolidge could have done nothing less than he did when the Boston police went on strike and robbers and gunmen began to ply their trade by broad daylight on Boston Common. No official sworn to uphold law and order and the constitution of the state could have ignored the challenge. It was a salutary incident for the country as a whole, and made Mr. Coolidge famous overnight. But it was hardly a great test of courage, nor is it now to be taken as evidence on the point of President Coolidge's liberality. Not even a radical governor of a radical state could have acted differently in the circumstances.

It is re-assuring to know that, whatever his attitude toward the duties of government, Mr. Coolidge is essentially of the plain people. He is not rich—indeed, he is to be classed as poor. In this day of well-nigh universal motoring he has never even owned an automobile. He is said to have no real estate. He was informed of his sudden elevation to the presidency in a poor hillside farmhouse, reading the fateful message by the light of an out-of-date oil lamp. His contempt for ostentation and show is well demonstrated by the fact that he took the oath of office at once from his father, a village notary public, instead of rushing to Washington to be sworn in with ceremony by a member of the supreme court. In all the hurriedly assembled newspaper biographies the fact of his simplicity is everywhere emphasized. Whatever else he may be, Calvin Coolidge has never suffered from the big head, has never exhibited the slightest desire to strut and pose.

President Coolidge has announced that he will carry on President Harding's policies. He means to do it, no doubt, but the inevitable difference between individual reactions will bring some deviations, as these policies develop to cross-roads of choice. No man can be president of the United States without impressing upon the administration the mark of his own personality. And so the country awaits, with consuming interest, the events which shall solve the enigma of Calvin Coolidge for us, and show us what manner of man he is.

A Community Tribute

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has proclaimed next Friday, the day that Warren Harding is to be buried in Marion, as a day of national prayer and mourning. In La Crosse Mayor Verchota has seconded the president's request, and it cannot be doubted that all La Crosse will be anxious fittingly to observe the day. The closing of public offices at one p. m., of Friday will doubtless be followed, here as elsewhere, by a general cessation of business, and in many cities plans are already afoot for a community tribute to the late president. It would seem a peculiarly appropriate thing, since the occasion is a day of mourning for the whole nation, to hold a solemn public gathering in which this community might give expression to its sorrow, and pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of the dead. As Warren Harding was president of us all, the occasion should be one in which all creeds and sects should unite. And so the suggestion is submitted that the clergymen of the city would be rendering a great public service by arranging a joint union service in Riverside Park, in which the entire community may join, for next Friday afternoon, August 10.

CHURCH NEWS

Furnished by the Church News Association

The Catholic church in the United States will enter upon scientific research with special reference to human ills, somewhat on the lines of the Rockefeller Institute. It will do so in connection with the Catholic University at Washington, and through the Benedictine Order. Those who will take up this research work believe that the monastic life is best for such as carry on the study. They also find it impossible, without the equipment of a great university or of a Rockefeller endowment, to carry on the work in ways fitting the needs and the expectations of the Catholic church. The Rev. Dr. Thomas V. Moore will head the plans, and he has just left America for England, accompanied by three others, there to spend two years in study in a famous Benedictine abbey. One of his associates was a former Anglican priest. One or two other Americans are to go to England later. Returning, they are to establish at Brookland, affiliated with the university, a Benedictine Abbey, in which for all time the monastic life may be lived and research work be carried on. The Archbishop of Baltimore has given approval. One of the monks accompanying Dr. Moore was formerly connected with famous St. George's School at Newport, Rhode Island.

Sixteen Protestant bodies in America have women preachers who belong to an International Association of Women Preachers. In Chicago at the end of August a national assembly is to be held, in which much time will be given to explanations of why women are preachers, what they do, and how they do it in ways that men do not and cannot. The president of the association is Miss Madeline Southard of Winfield, Kansas. In the program as announced eight religious bodies are represented in the list of speakers. The Women's Christian Temperance Union employs women preachers to do Sunday school work of a general character, and Americanization work among immigrants, claiming that they can do these forms of work for women and children as men cannot. The Salvation Army, the Disciples of Christ and the Christian church employ women who have been ordained to work for and with children and teach other women to do so, and the Methodist Protestant church favors women preachers in some home mission fields.

Plymouth Brethren, little known as religious bodies, and small as they are, divided into four competitive groups, are unusually active and carrying on a remarkable work. They have no local or national organizations, and call their meetings assemblies, that they may avoid the appearance of being churches. Their work this summer is three fold. In the Adirondacks their travelling evangelists are searching out obscure settlements and families, and spiritually ministering to them. In New England and Middle West cities their business men are in touch with men discharged from prisons, and are both employing them, and getting them again into some measure of community life. Lastly, among young men they are maintaining assemblies, and getting these young men to enter upon personal evangelism.

Methodists of influence, long familiar with church politics, are warning other Methodists and the public against accepting the view that Methodist union north and south is an accomplished fact. Commissioners have two or three times agreed, only to find later on that their agreement came to nothing. Frankly, the trouble has been the negro. Such obstacle to union was not always mentioned in the negotiations, when such were private, nor was the negro named in the reports of success by early commissioners or failure by later ones. The negro was there, however, and openly it has been said not until the Civil War receded still farther into the past, and some leaders have passed to their reward, would union be possible.

A commission of eminent men, named by the British government, is about to meet to adjust all matters of religious administration in Palestine. Among these matters is the conduct and control of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, Jerusalem, which has been the scene of many disgraceful episodes between Christians, with Moslems as peace makers. There are both Latin and Orthodox Patriarchs of Perusalem, and both have claimed to be the custodians of the church in question. The older right seems to belong to the Eastern church, but for generations the Roman Catholic claims have been more persistently pushed. Now a permanent body is to be formed for the sole purpose of preventing further clashes. Such is one outcome of British control of Palestine in place of the Turk.

Personal Memories of Harding

BY ROBERT T. SMALL
Copyright, 1923.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—At a time like this, with a president dead, personal reminiscences of the man crowd fast upon one in a sort of kaleidoscopic confusion. But to those who were privileged to know Mr. Harding more or less intimately, as the writer was, there is one great outstanding impression of his occupancy of the White House. It was his wonderful respect for the president of the United States.

Warren Harding did not believe that the presidency was but a vehicle to forward the inordinate ambitions of an individual. He did not believe that the power of the presidency was a thing to be wielded against one's enemies. He spoke always of the office with the greatest reverence, almost with awe. He thought of himself as but a humble man with a great responsibility placed in his keeping. If he could but administer the trust so that in the end his fellow beings might say "Well done, thou good and faithful servant,' his satisfaction, he often declared, would be complete. Mr. Harding did not look upon himself as a brilliant genius. He did not feel that he was the only man of his generation fitted for the presidency. At times it seemed that almost he carried this highly developed sense of modesty too far. It made some of those with whom he came in contact rate him far below his worth.

The innate modesty of the man made him couch many of his statements in a negative form and thus fail to carry the conviction to the man in the street that a more positive form of statement from a less able, less sincere public official would convey.

In speaking of what he intended to do, or not to do as president, Mr. Harding never used the personal pronoun "I." It was always "The Executive." "That is as far as the executive may go," he would say, and in this phrase he expressed his reverence for the constitutional division of governmental authority, the individual integrity of the legislative, the executive and the judicial.

Tender of Feelings

Mr. Harding was a great stickler for orderliness. He always wanted to do what he considered "the becoming thing." The words "seemly" and "sweet" were often on his tongue. He did not like to hurt the feelings of even the most lowly person about him.

I recall that there was a great mystery once at Marion in the period between the election and the inauguration of Mr. Harding. The president-elect and Mrs. Harding were going to Cleveland. They thought they could slip away from the newspapermen—possibly even get away from the secret service operatives who were already on the job guarding the new executive-to-be. There was great surprise therefore when one of the correspondents casually remarked:

"What are you going to Cleveland for today, senator?"

Mr. Harding was obviously annoyed.

"If any of you fellows go with me to Cleveland, or mention my going, you will incur mountains of displeasure," shot back the president-elect.

The mystery of the whole thing puzzled the correspondents. They thought the visit must have some great political significance back of it. But it leaked out at last that the president was going to Cleveland to consult a noted dentist and desired that his going be kept a secret so as not to hurt the feelings of the local dentist in Marion.

Disliked Trailing

For a considerable time after his election, Mr. Harding chafed visibly at the surveillance of the correspondents and the secret service men. He did not see why a president, much less a president-elect, should be the object of so much solicitude. When he was starting for Florida for a six-weeks' sojourn just before the inauguration Mr. Harding called together the correspondents at Marion.

"I am going to hold aloof from you fellows for at least two weeks of my trip," he said. "I don't want to be rude but I am in deadly earnest. If you attempt to follow me I will make it—make it miserable for you, that's all."

Of course a satisfactory arrangement was worked out, the correspondents did not annoy the president, and rather than resent their presence in the end, he would often send for them to just sit around and talk. After he was president, Mr. Harding entertained the newspapermen at the White House and often met with them at games of hearts and golf. Mr. Harding was a good card player and loved the relaxation that the games provided. His love of golf is well-known. He was an extremely ethical golfer. He played strictly to the rules and he held his opponents to them as well.

"Play the game properly or do not play at all," he said. Mr. Harding was patient with his shortcomings at golf. Often he would be completely exasperated at a round, when his score would go up to 116 or more. One day as the writer met him at a White House conference, he was aglow.

"I would like'd to have had you today," he exclaimed; "I made an 88 at Chevy Chase."

Every golfer will recognize what a proud day that was in the president's life.

Subject to Valet

President Harding will go down in history as one of the handsomest and best-dressed chief executives the nation has ever known. And yet when he was told on entering the White House that he would be provided with a valet, fairly squirmed.

"Have I got to have him?" he inquired.

"Yes, sir, it goes with the job," said one of the correspondents.

"Then I'll have to grin and bear it, but I never thought I would have a thing like that wished on me."

Calvin Coolidge unquestionably today feels the same way about the valet, but like Mr. Harding he will find him an indispensable adjunct. A president must dress properly for many varying occasions. He has not the time to attend to such details himself. The valet must do that for him. Mr. Harding's wardrobe when he reached Washington just prior to March 4, 1921, was thought to be complete and in every way becoming. But it was not long before the valet had made many changes in it. The valet did not like the width of the stripes they wore on trousers for formal dress out in Ohio. Mr. Harding wore a pair of these trousers at his inauguration. The valet suffered excruciatingly. No one else paid any particular attention to the pants, but just the same, they disappeared from view for all time.

Father Survives Him

So far as is known here, Mr. Harding is the first president of the United States to die with his father still living. Dr. George T. Harding never thought to outlive his distinguished son, but he is left today to mourn his great personal loss. Dr. Harding had planned to come to Washington and ride in his old country doctor's buggy in the inaugural parade, but the festivities of the inauguration were called off.

No Enemies

Often it has been said that no man was strong unless somebody hated him. If that be true, then Warren G. Harding was not a strong man. It would have hurt him deeply to feel that he inspired hatred in any living soul.

MILLIONS FOR PEOPLE

BY EDWARD THIERRY

NEW YORK — A young man 29 years old is learning how to spend a hundred million dollars.

That's Ralph Hayes' job. As director of the New York Community Trust he expects to devote a lifetime to learning how future generations can best spend the nation's wasted wealth.

Who will spend the hundred million—or perhaps a half billion or so—100 years from now? And how?

"Nobody today can answer these questions," says Hayes. "Nobody even knows how much money will be available in 50 or 100 years."

A group of banks have joined in perpetuating the idea conceived in 1914 by the late Frederick Goff of Cleveland to establish a people's foundation—comparable to the great Rockefeller, Carnegie and Russell Sage Foundations—for the economic and beneficial distribution of private fortunes intended for civic and philanthropic purposes.

"We want to make philanthropy fool-proof," says Hayes. "Vast sums of money are wasted because people do not know how to make wills, because they make foolish bequests, tieing up millions in ill-advised plans that go wrong in after-years because times and customs change."

Hayes, who has just announced the detailed plans of the Community Trust, points to thousands of wills here and abroad that waste untold wealth and in which time has frustrated the desires of donors.

"They tell the tragic comedy," he said, "of the Dead Hand whose withering touch blights living hopes. Here's just one sample: The will of a Pennsylvania woman left a trust fund to help not more than 12 clergymen decayed by age or infirmity who were not addicted to tobacco in any form!"

Upon Hayes has fallen the mantle of the late Judge Goff, who selected him to help establish the Cleveland Foundation and then, on his deathbed, urged the trustees of the newly founded New York Community Trust to assign his youthful associate the task of setting in motion the machinery that is expected in some future generation to build up a people's foundation that will assure the use of enormous sums of money for real public benefit.

"This was Judge Goff's dream," said Hayes. "He believed that too much emphasis is placed on stone and mortar — on monumental buildings and cities beautiful, that are fine things but too limited — and not enough on human needs. He wanted perpetual machinery to weld together the thousands of small fortunes so that the aggregate income—eventually overshadowing the millions in private foundations—might be devoted to humanity."

Forty such community trusts have been established throughout the country. The Cleveland Foundation, only nine years old, has pledges of resources estimated at $100,000,000—to be received in future years—and a present income of half a million; and it has already functioned in surveys and investigations, including schools, recreation and crime and justice. In Boston a similar sum is available.

"We are learning how to spend this money," said Hayes, "by inquiring into those things which concern the public most. Relatively, we are now spending pennies where future generations will spend dollars. Banks merely hold the funds in trust for humanity, for the people now have and always will have a majority in the board of trustees."

These public trustees are appointed by the mayor of New York, the senior United States circuit judge, and the presidents of the State Chamber of Commerce, Academy of Medicine, Bar Association and Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Hayes is from Cresline, O. At 22 he was secretary to Secretary of War Baker; then assistant to the secretary of war; army lieutenant and liaison officer between General Pershing and the Peace Commission; assistant to the president of the Cleveland Trust Company; assistant to Will Hays, movie dictator; and now director of the New York Community Trust. He is the author of several books on the war, director of a dozen public enterprises—and unmarried.

LOOKIT, FELLERS, CHARLEY BLODGETT IS BACK AT LAST

After traveling more than a thousand miles overland in a week, to get to La Crosse, Charles Blodgett, former assistant engineer of the local district office of the state highway commission, is renewing old acquaintances. Mr. Blodgett is accompanied, by his wife, whom he met in La Crosse, and is en route to his boyhood home at Green Bay. He is now a member of the faculty of Carnegie Tech, at Pittsburgh, and came here from the school's summer surveying camp in the West Virginia mountains. Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett will remain in the city until Tuesday, as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reynolds, 1121 Division street.

The shark sucker, a defenseless and retiring fish, takes shelter in the mouth of the savage and voracious sharks, but it is not harmed by the sharks.

GERMAN INVASION OF INDUSTRIAL LONDON

For the first time since the war the organizers of the London Fair and Market, a trade exhibition of toys, jewelry, hardware and fancy goods, decided to throw their doors open to the ex-enemy countries, and from Berlin, Hamburg, Bavaria, Nuremburg, Elberfeld, Bremen, and other places there has come a prompt invasion of the Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington, where the show is now in progress.

Germany's effort to regain her ancient supremacy in the toymaking world is bold and undisguised, and, if appearances count for anything, she is already well on the road to recapturing the British market. The toy stands are the strongest part of the Fair, and seventy-five per cent of the exhibits are German. One of the quaintest anomalies of the show is the presence of a British V. C. as a salesman on a stand selling German clocks.

FARM OUTLOOK CRITICAL

Next few weeks decide fate of year says Babson.

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass.—Roger W. Babson issued the following statement today regarding the crop situation. Mr. Babson is not as bearish regarding the immediate condition of the farmer as are many of his contemporaries, but he does feel that the farming situation will reach a crisis this fall.

"Twenty years ago the great news item affecting industries, commerce, and business in general was the monthly report of the crop situation. For days before these crop reports were issued, bankers, manufacturers, and merchants would speculate on their probable figure. For days after these crop reports were issued, newspapers would have editorials and comments thereon. I well remember when the telegraph lines and the ticket service would be held up pending the issue of the monthly crop report in Washington. Such an interest, however, no longer exists. Crop reports are now issued without much comment. There is little or no suspense and speculation. Whether we have become hardened to the situation or whether more important things have come into our lives, only the future can tell.

* * * *

"Crops, however, are still a very important factor for they are the basis of American prosperity. Unless the farmer is prosperous, the nation cannot be prosperous. Nearly a third of our population is dependent upon the crops for its income, especially on such crops as wheat and corn. If these farmers cannot make money, they cannot buy goods. The farmers supply the greatest buying power of the country. When the farmer loses money, the buying power of the country is seriously curtailed. This is one of the great reasons for the bearish attitude taken today by financiers. The farming centers are depressed. It is possible, of course, that conditions during the next few months may entirely change the situation for the better. The only point I desire to make is that the farmer has reached a very critical period and the next few months will determine whether a year of effort will give him a profit or loss. A bushel of grain must bring in exchange—that is, in other goods—as much as it brought in pre-war times before this country can have real prosperity.

* * * *

"At the close of the war America was raising the grain for itself and a large part of Europe. Since the war Europe has seeded down large areas and has correspondingly increased production of grain. Other countries, such as Canada, the Argentine, and Australia, owing to cheaper labor costs, are competing keenly with American farmers and are underselling American grain in Liverpool, the wheat market of the world. As a result, the American farmer is facing a bumper crop and at the same time carrying over about one hundred million bushels from last year's crop. As it is very difficult to increase the consumption of wheat through any advertising or other propaganda, this puts our American farmers in a very critical situation. Hence, during the next few months the crop reports, not only of this country but the other great countries, should be studied very carefully. The American farmer should not yet give up hope. As stated, something may happen, in this or some other country, which may entirely change the situation one way or the other. One thing, however, we all should keep in mind, namely, that unless the farmer is prosperous the rest of us cannot be prosperous. Hence, it is up to all of us to help the farming situation in every practical way.

* * * *

"This agricultural situation is largely responsible for the drop in the Babsonchart from its high point of eleven percent above normal in March to four percent below normal where it stands at the present time. The truth is that the farmers are greatly curtailing their buying and this is being reflected throughout all industries. When the farmer stops buying from the retailer, the retailer stops buying from the jobber, the jobber stops buying from the manufacturer, and the manufacturer shuts down his plant. It is easy to tell them that they must suffer with the rest, but the fact is that the farmers are suffering more than the rest. Moreover, the action of the stock markets and commodity markets today is largely due to this suffering of the farmers."

SAVE THE WINNESHIEK BOTTOMS

Come! Let us save the bottoms
All along the Winneshiek
Where we have a paradise
Man, fowl, fish and beast may seek.

Wander through this wildwood beauty
Where the streams forever wind,
Take a look at Mother Nature
Just to see what you may find.

Linger 'mid these verdant islands
Of so many shapes and kind,
Billowing in luscious grasses
Such as wild ducks love to find.

Note the squirrels as they scamper
From the ground to top of tree;
See the insects as they flutter
In their paradise so free.

Here and there you find the footprints
Of the countless denizens
Who are roaming free and happy
Through these sheltered glades and fens.

Listen to the many song birds—
Each one carols you his lay;
Would you drive them from the bottoms
With a drainage plan some day?

When you take your line to angle
Then it is you come to know
Of the million finny members
Who are swimming down below.

Come, ye friends who cast a ballot,
You must throw aside reserve;
Now's the time to save the bottoms
For a National Preserve.

GALESVILLE BANK PASSES FORTIETH YEAR ON JULY 30

Founded as Private Institution in 1883; Passes Million Dollar Mark in Resources

Monday, July 30, marked the fortieth anniversary of the Bank of Galesville. The Bank of Galesville was founded by Isaac Clark and W. C. Brooks as a private bank in 1883. The first home of the bank was a small brick building, which is now a part of the storeroom occupied by Francar's drugstore. The business was continued as a private bank until 1885, when articles of incorporation were filed. The capital stock was $25,000. Under the new order of things Isaac Clark was the first president; Judge A. W. Newman, vice president; W. C. Brooks, cashier. Directors: J. O. Melby, Wilson Davis, Daniel Kennedy, Iver Pederson.

The present bank building was built in 1887. For more than a year there has been a rumor that the Bank of Galesville will soon provide more commodious quarters to accommodate the business.

When Isaac Clark passed on, his son, E. F. Clark, succeeded to the presidency, and has held that position down to the present time. W. C. Brooks sold his holdings to J.O. Melby, who succeeded him as cashier and continued until the J. O. Melby Bank at Whitehall was established. C. M. Kellogg followed Mr. Melby as cashier. He was succeeded by J. E. Cance, who has served in that capacity twenty seven years.

The bank has two vice presidents today: Ben W. Davis and S. C. French. J. A. Hammer is assistant cashier. The directors, aside from the officers, are L. N. Hammer, W. S. Wadleigh, F. A. Kellman.

The first statement made to the state by the Bank of Galesville showed total resources of $32,000. Today the total resources are more than one million dollars.

The Bank of Galesville was the first and only Trempealeau county bank to pass the million dollar mark. —GALESVILLE REPUBLICAN

DANCE WILL RAISE HARD ROAD FUNDS

WILL TUNNEL THROUGH CONTINENTAL DIVIDE TO SHORTEN DISTANCE ACROSS NATION

DENVER, Colo. — The United States supreme court has reduced the distance from New York to San Francisco by 178 miles.

In a decision upholding the legality of an act creating the Moffat Tunnel Commission of Colorado the supreme court also removed the last legal obstacle to the accomplishment of one of the world's greatest engineering feats.

As a result, work will begin within sixty days on the Moffat tunnel, a tube a little over six miles long, through the heart of the Rockies.

One of Longest

It will bore directly through the Continental Divide from McCoy to Dotsero. Thus it will cut across the extreme northwestern part of Eagle county, nearly in the center of the state.

The distance between these two towns is less than 10 miles—as the crow flies. But as the railroad runs —it is closer to 185 miles; 185 miles of tortuous track over and around mountains. The tunnel will reduce from hours to minutes the time required between the two points.

When completed, the Moffat tunnel will be the longest in the United States.

It will be one of the five longest transportation tunnels in the world.

The Mont Cenis tunnel, Modane, France, to Bardonecchia, Italy, is seven and ninety-eight hundredths miles in length. The St. Gotthard tunnel is nine and three-tenths miles long. The Alberg tunnel is six and thirty-six hundredths miles long, and the Simplon tunnel is twelve and three-tenths miles long.

In an engineering sense it is believed the Moffat tunnel will rank even as of greater importance than other of the world's famous tunnels.

Time Shortened

Geological formations which will be penetrated, scientists believe, would practically have been impossible to pierce a few years ago.

However, late mechanical devices have been invented which are expected to make possible the construction of the tube in less time than was required for the building of the other and longer tunnels.

Transcontinental trains, engineers predict, will be running through the Moffat tunnel within three years. Ten years were required for the building of the Mt. Cenis tunnel. The St. Gotthard took nine years, the Alberg was completed in something more than three years and the Simplon tunnel was begun in 1898 and was finished in 1905.

Summarized, other facts about the Moffat tunnel are:

Elevation of tunnel, eastern portal, 9,190 feet; western portal, 9,100 feet.

Sixteen Feet Wide

Construction of tunnel lowers railroad tracks vertical distance of 2,406 feet.

Grades, 0.3 on eastern end and 0.8 on western end.

Size of tunnel, 16 feet in width and 24 feet in height.

Construction, main tunnel through a pioneer tunnel first to be driven. Pioneer tunnel 8x8 feet and center line 75 feet from main tunnel.

Formation, probably of granite, gneiss and schist. Similar to formation in Simplon tunnel, with substitution of granite in Moffat tunnel for misintegrated mica and schist rock in the Simplon.

The new tunnel will bear the name of the late David H. Moffat, who built the railroad west from Denver to Steamboat Springs, which also bears his name.

High in the Rockies, cutting through the Continental Divide, a tunnel soon will be drilled. It will shorten the transcontinental trip from New York to the western coast by 178 miles. This bit of super-engineering is the realization of a dream of the late David H. Moffat, and it will bear his name. The illustration shows clearly the problem before the engineers. That it is a genuine problem will be realized when it is remembered the tunnel will be approximately 9,100 feet above sea level.

AUTO GIFT TOO LATE TO HALT JAIL TERM

RACINE, Wis.—On the day on which Rudolph Bien was to present his wife with an automobile as a surprise gift, he was sentenced to serve six months on charges of non-support and abandonment.

Bien left here in January to work in Oshkosh, leaving his wife and two children behind. He told the judge that while in Oshkosh he saved all his money to buy the car for his wife and was ready to drive home with it when arrested.

Judge E. R. Burgess felt, however, that a six months' jail sentence might change his story.

"KNOTHOLE BOYS" NOW SEE GAMES FROM THE INSIDE

GREENWOOD, S. C. — Greenwood's boys no longer climb trees or raise their voices in protest at decisions of umpires of the Carolina baseball league as seen through knotholes in the fence. "The Keyhole Boys" have moved inside and now do their protesting from the first-base line.

Visions of the days when inability to raise a quarter kept him and his friends from getting more than a stolen glimpse of their favorite team in action brought about formation of the "Knothole Boys Club" here by Joel S. Bailey, president of the Greenwood Baseball club and a member of the local Rotary Club. As a result the Greenwood Rotary Club took up the plan as a part of its boy's work program.

For the sum of 10 cents and presentation of a card issued when he signs a pledge, any boy in Greenwood can join the club. The plan is to get every boy in town into the baseball park and the results, it is said, have been so good that the Rotary Club is planning to enlarge the bleacher section assigned to the boys.

The pledge the boys sign follows: "I will attend Sunday School every Sunday, except in case of sickness. I will not use curse words. I will not gamble. I will not lie. I will be honest. I will live a clean life. I have read, or had read to me, the above obligation and I promise that I will always try to obey it."

Membership in the club and attendance at the ball games does not preclude the occasional visits to "Granma's out in the country" or frequent trips to the "old swimmin' hole." For the Carolina league teams play only on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

COUNTRY CLUBS HAVE MEETING IN WEST SALEM

Mrs. Porter Tells of Social Work of Americans In China

The monthly meeting of the Community Council was held at the Insane asylum grounds at West Salem Saturday afternoon. Many La Crosse people attended the meeting. After the picnic lunch which was served on the Asylum lawn a meeting of the executive committee was called. Mrs. J. F. Saltz Vice President of the organization was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. Val Kepple read the report of the last meeting and Mrs. G. R. Real gave the report on the Italian Street fair.

The Italian Street Fair was voted a great success due to the splendid cooperation of the many members of the council. The women of West Salem who were entertaining the Community Council in their town today did splendidly in their booth at the Street Fair. The West Salem band was also a great attraction at the fair. The Committee reported that over $259.00 was cleared at the Fair.

People were asked to come to the next meeting which will be held in September prepared to pay the dues of $1.00 which pays for the six luncheons that the members have at the meetings.

The Homemakers Club invited all members of the Community Council to attend the picnic which is to be held at the Onalaska Agricultural school Tuesday noon.

Miss Regan, the County nurse told the members of the Welfare Special which is to visit the community in September, and asked that each member see that one child was brought to the clinic. In this way all children in the county needing attention should be reached. The "Special" is to be at the fair for one day. The Community Council also voted to have a booth at the fair this fall, where candy, pop and ice cream will be sold. Miss Porter, formerly Miss Dudley of West Salem who has been living in China for a number of years gave a very interesting talk on social conditions in China. She told about some of the missionary, industrial, and social service work which is being done there by the foreign women, that is women who aren't natives, China. Mrs. Porter said, is a fascinating country. It contains 500,000 more square miles than the United States and is inhabited by four times as many people. The same race, however has inhabited the country since 700 B. C. a people frugal, courteous, contended and industrious. The people who invented block printing, movable type, the mariners compass, gun powder and many other wonderful things while the western world was a wilderness. China because, she became too proud and self sufficient and would associate with no outsiders had a fall. The religion, Confucianism, the belief that it was wrong to do anything better than your ancestors has also always been a great handicap to the country.

The industrial situation, the cheap labor of the Chinese, especially the women is being investigated by foreigners. All sorts of social work is done among the women. Mrs. Porter told of the establishing of various institutions in China and the methods they are using to help the people. Work is given to the women to do in their home, they teach them to read and write and do many other things to help them.

Mrs. Porter showed some of the work done by the women of China and marketed in this country by the organizers of the employment bureaus.

After the meeting some of the members were shown through the Insane Asylum by Mrs. Gullickson the matron.

About fifty people attended the meeting this month.

That La Crosse has several girls who are making unusually good records in the physical education line in various parts of the country. Among them is Miss Harriet Dawson of Smith Coulee.

Miss Dawson is a graduate of the La Crosse High school and also of the University of Wisconsin. She graduated from the department of physical education at Wisconsin in 1922 and took a position in Chicago as a playground worker.

While she was employed on the playground, Mrs. Warren, an executive of the Illinois Women's Athletic club chose her from the playground workers to go to Atlantic City to the Sea Shore Home for Crippled Children. Three girls were chosen from every state represented in the Illinois Athletic club to work there.

Among the one hundred and fifty children at the Sea Shore Home, Miss Dawson did corrective gymnasium work. She spent four months there and then returned to Chicago and taught gymnasium in the Diversey-Parkway Private High school.

After Miss Dawson had been in Chicago for a few months she was again chosen by Mrs. Warren to do some more work for the Illinois Athletic club. Four girls were sent to the south to establish physical education in six towns in Mississippi, to aid in the development of some of the backward districts there.

Six weeks were spent in Mississippi, a pageant put on, the teachers trained to carry on the physical education work and a county nurse installed.

Miss Dawson has returned to her home recently after a summer at the university where she was working for her Master Degree.

THINGS MUSICAL

By H. MARGARET JOSTEN

MUSIC would languish utterly in La Crosse during the summer but for one saving circumstance. The more insistent the calliope on the excursion boat becomes, the greater the temptation becomes on warm summer nights to free the vibrations of untuned pianos and human voices from the decent confines of four walls, the more infrequent becomes the opportunity to hear real music. Were it not for the return of some of the young artists who during the winter court fame abroad La Crosse would be a dull place for the music-lover in the summer.

The return which has this year occasioned the most interested comment is that of Eleanore Schweizer who has during the past year been studying and appearing professionally in New York. She sang first at the final morning musical at the Normal school, giving the middle group in a program by Mr. Halik. On Tuesday of the week past at a musicalle given by Mrs. Charles Schweizer and Miss Ida Schumann she and Mr. Halik again appeared together, Miss Schweizer on this occasion giving the major part of the program. Sleep, why dost thou leave me, of Haendel, several groups of little songs lovely of themselves, interpreted with taste and appreciation, and for an unexpected climax a number from Aida comprised her program.

A Great Development

Neither the affection with which Miss Schweizer is regarded nor the auspices under which she appeared can be said to have materially affected the reactions of her audience. People were frankly surprised at the astonishing development in her voice. She sings without apparent effort, controls her voice with the nicety of good training, the effect of volume or of infinite delicacy she seems able to achieve at will. She has some facility with the languages singing in French, German and Italian, as well as in English.

In Violin Art

Blessed with a gracious and pleasing manner as well as with vocal ability and real musicianship it is apparent that Eleanore Schweizer is to be another whose success is so gratifying to local pride. To those who know every word of praise of her, each bit of news of her successes will inevitably be associated with knowledge of the affection at skill and thoroughness of the most competent teacher who laid the foundation of her musicianship, her aunt, Miss Ida Schumann.

Halik Finished

One no longer congratulates Glen Halik upon his ability or his achievements—he is too thoroughly the professional, now-a-days. Rather one congratulates his fellow townsmen that Mr. Halik still summers in La Crosse and has lost none of his generosity and kindliness. He has on each return a new group of compositions added to his repertoire which seems more appealing than those one heartily acclaimed on a previous occasion.

But the secret of his popularity is to be found less in the choice of compositions than in the meaning he finds in them. As he plays one may follow the brook rippling lightly over shining sands, cool between green willows, dark beneath a brown bank or may feel the poignancy of some emotion, tender or sad. One feels that Mr. Halik has "arrived" artistically. He no longer simply plays his instrument well, it is now to him a means of expression. He has a gift for creating with it exquisite moments, fleeting and perishable but strangely enduring in memory.

About "Putsch"

Hewitt Toland, who needs no farther identification in La Crosse in spite of his lengthening residence in the east, is the composer of the words and music of a song "Wake Up! And Give the Boys the Bonus." Spirited with melody and rhythm to popularize it, it has point both musically and rhetorically.

The composition has been published by the Matthias Post of the American Legion, Westport, Conn. Through this organization it is being disseminated throughout the country. Dedicated to the ex-service men the song merits success both on its own account and for the purpose to which it is being put. Apart from doing its share in the work to secure the bonus, the funds earned by it after expenses are paid will be used to equip hospitals and homes where disabled veterans are located with wireless apparatus, games and other devices of amusement.

Mr. Toland had to his credit before he left La Crosse several pleasing and promising compositions among them an Ave Maria, which has been sung on several occasions in one of the local churches.

CHILD HEALTH SERVICE CAR TO COME HERE

Welfare Special To Work Throughout La Crosse County

Wisconsin's Child's Welfare Special, providing health service for rural mothers and children, is to spend eight days in this community, from September 12 to 21, making five stops at central points.

The Welfare Special is a truck weighing four tons, eleven feet long and six feet wide. At the rear is a folding compartment, which is used as a dressing room. The driver's cab, which is separated from the rest of the car by a partition and a sliding door, is also used as a dressing room, the main room being left for the examinations.

The special carries a woman physician trained in pediatrics, a public health nurse, and an expert chauffeur who also operates a motion picture machine used in giving lectures.

The purpose of the Welfare Special is to offer to the mothers and children in the rural communities all the advantages and advice on health conditions which are available in the cities. Instruction in the preparation of food, the care of the teeth, care of babies, etc. No corrective work is done and all defects are referred to the family physician. A record of defects is kept by the county nurse so that she can do follow up work. A copy of this record is given to the mother so that she will have a permanent record of the advice given.

Mrs. V. S. Keppel of Holmen has been appointed by the La Crosse county health commission to be county chairman in charge of arrangements for the Welfare Special. Mrs. Keppel is being assisted by Miss Regan, the county nurse. La Crosse was the first county in the state to have a county nurse.

Mrs. Keppel has appointed the following people to make arrangements for the Welfare Special in the five different centers where it will stop.

Holmen, Mindoro, West Salem, La Crosse and Newburg's Corners have been chosen for the stops because of the central location. This division will make it possible for people to visit the Special from all of the community. Excepting the stop at Holmen, which is to be made as the Special comes in from Pepin county, only two day stops are to be made because of the expense and the work entailed in setting up the Special. The car is equipped with heat, light, water and is efficient in every way. It is a special privilege to have the Special at the Interstate fair at La Crosse. The state and many larger fairs asked to have the Welfare Special but La Crosse is to be the only one visited.

It is hoped that people throughout the community will co-operate with the workers in every way. All children, especially those of pre-school age, should be brought to the Special for examination.

WHO'S COOLIDGE? BIG QUESTION IN FOREIGN CAPITALS

Many of them Jump to Hope that He Will Favor U. S. Help Abroad

LOSS OF HARDING FELT BY THE COMMON FOLK

Made Great Appeal as Straight, Kindly Man

BY WILLIAM A. BIRD
(Special Cable Dispatch to the Tribune)
Copyright, 1923

PARIS.—What manner of man is Calvin Coolidge?

In every chancellory of Europe this question has been asked since the fateful Friday morning when the cable and radio flashed news of the death of Warren G. Harding. The difference in time between Europe and that far distant American city, San Francisco, is approximately nine hours so it was not until well along into Friday morning that the announcement of the passing of Mr. Harding became known.

The American administration system is so little understood by the ordinary European that the accession of Mr. Coolidge to the duties of the presidency has, and will continue, to raise many hopes of American participation in the affairs of Europe. The new president's declaration that no change in the policy of the late President Harding is contemplated has been accepted not in the same light that it was received in the states, but rather in the belief that Mr. Coolidge felt it the polite and proper thing to do at the moment he assumed the office of chief executive. In brief, there is the hope that the new regime may perhaps lessen the attitude of aloofness held by the United States since Mr. Harding came into power.

Harding Death Mourned

All over Europe, in the simple homes of the plain people there is real grief over the death of Mr Harding. It can be said with the utmost confidence that no American president of recent times made so direct and straightforward an appeal to the sympathy of the common man.

"He was a good man, an honest man, a sincere man."

The above phrases were those used most by the little groups that gathered to discuss the news of Mr. Harding's death.

It would be useless to pretend that Europe regarded Mr. Harding as a great statesman. It was, in fact, his very lack of craftiness and cleverness that endeared him most to the hearts of the common people. They felt that he was someone like themselves, a plain citizen bewildered in the masses of diplomatic and political intrigue, but striving against more clever and crafty minds to make the elementary qualities of honesty and good will prevail over the more subtle forces of the international political game.

Held Him a Friend

The writer, in numerous visits to all the countries of Europe, has often had occasion to become acquainted with the popular feeling regarding Mr. Harding and has heard countless Europeans express themselves in terms that made it plain that they regarded Mr. Harding as a warm-hearted and generous friend than as the chief of a great state, who might inspire awe and respect because of the power vested in him. They felt he was more interested in people than anything else and even when his official acts might not be approved by national sentiment in this or some other nation there was rarely a word of resentment gainst the man himself.

Millions of people in Europe today are struggling amid the bitter disappointments of war-wrecked lives. The loss of the kindly sympathy of a man they loved and trusted is felt keenly.

Puzzled by Coolidge

Such a vast gulf exists between the personality of Mr. Harding and that of President Coolidge that Europeans generally, as they read today the cabled biographs and sketches of the new executive were puzzled by the contrast. Mr. Harding they knew to be genial and expansive. Indeed, Mr. Harding had spent some time abroad and because of this was better known than most men who have been chief executive of the United States. Mr. Coolidge, a retiring, quiet, withal friendly man, is unknown to people here. The office of vice-president is a more effective barrier against knowledge of a man's personality on this side the air is in America, where one of the standing jokes of politics concerns itself with the anonymity of the man who is vice president.

Surprised at "Firmness"

It came therefore as a surprise to the average European to read the description of "austerity, firmness, and iron will" as qualities of President Coolidge, and many thought the new executive to be temperamentally akin to former President Wilson. The impression, coupled with the recollection that Mr. Coolidge has never been openly antagonistic to the League of Nations, was a favorable one because Mr. Wilson has ever been held in high regard over here.

HEADS UNCOVERED AS FUNERAL TRAIN PASSES EASTWARD

Westerners Put Flowers and Wreaths on Train Bearing Body of President Harding

ON BOARD HARDING FUNERAL TRAIN AT ELKO, Nev.—By the Associated Press.—The pioneers of the west paid their respects today to the memory of Warren G. Harding.

As the funeral train bearing the body of the late president crossed the broad state of Nevada, hurrying on toward Washington, men, women and children stood by the railroad side with heads uncovered, hearts aching and often with misty eyes.

President Harding had had the pioneer much in mind during his ill-destined trip. He had visited their settlements in southern Utah, he had celebrated their achievements in Meacham, Ore., and he had visited what he liked to call "the nation's last frontier" in Alaska. Today was the pioneer's opportunity to show appreciation and love for the dead leader, and they did.

Put Flowers on Train

Not alone did these pioneers stand silent and uncovered, but they placed bouquets and wreaths aboard the train in order that there might always be fresh blossoms in the death chamber of the last car.

The hearts of these sun-bronzed men, women and children not only ached because of the death of their chief, but they beat in sympathy for Mrs. Harding. It can be said without fear of contradiction that no living woman is more popular in the west than Florence Harding and the heart of the west went out to her in her bereavement. Throughout the day she continued to bear up bravely under her great sorrow.

The funeral train is in every sense all that the name implies. It is silent, deadly so. The atmosphere of happiness and comradeship that filled its coaches on the trip west is gone, strangely missing in the conduct of those who are making the journey home. Only the newspapermen astir and the typewriter keys clicking news of the train break the complete silence prevailing.

Keep Death Watch

Every two hours, a detail of four men, representing the army, navy and marine corps pass through the coaches from their car ahead to relieve as many of their comrades on death watch in the car where the coffin rests. The curtains there are raised high at the windows. Persons who gathered at every point of today's run through eastern California, Nevada and tonight in western Utah, saw a picture through the windows of the rear car, the first glimpse of which caused many of them to turn away and others to bring forth their handkerchiefs, not to wave in hearty greeting as was done everywhere on the western tour, but to wipe away tears which could not be suppressed or concealed.

Never was there a higher tribute paid to any of the nation's dead than was given by these men, women and children of the states traversed today who collected along the railroad route from each desert settlement, ranch house, town and city nearby.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Due to the fact that August 10th falls on the feast of Saint Lawrence in the Roman Catholic church calendar and according to the liturgical laws of that church mourning services cannot be held on that day, Archbishop Messmer of this diocese issued instructions Saturday to all priests under his charge to celebrate public requiem masses in honor of the late president on Thursday, Aug. 9.

FOUR KILLED IN AUTO AND TRAIN COLLISION

PLAN MONUMENT TO HARDING IN SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—A plan to have the citizens of San Francisco erect a monument to President Warren G. Harding to perpetuate the solemn memories surrounding his death here and to serve as a tribute to his life and works has been suggested by the San Francisco Bulletin and has been accepted by a number of leading cities, the Bulletin announced Saturday. A meeting has been called for Monday to discuss preliminaries.

"OH RATS!" SAYS MR. VOLSTEAD

NEW YORK.—By The Associated Press.—Andrew J. Volstead, father of the federal prohibition enforcement law Saturday fled precipitately from reporters who showed a dispositon to scoff when he insisted New York was dry.

The reporters located him on the liner America, on which he sailed for Copenhagen, where he will tell the International Congress Against Alcohol what prohibition has done for America.

Mr. Volstead said "a complete survey" of New York, made in two days, had convinced him all New York saloons were closed that no drinks are to be had in New York, that there are no east side "dives," and that prospetrity has increased because of the law bearing his name.

In Chicago, he added, there had not been a legitimate case of delirium tremens in two years.

"But New York is none too fond of the dry laws," said a reporter.

"Oh rats," said Mr. Volstead.

"There are places not so far away, where liquor is sold and where intoxicated men may be seen," said another.

"Oh rats," said Mr. Volstead.

"The farmers throughout the country are making wine and hard cider," he was told.

"Rats, they're not doing it on my farm or anybody's farm."

"There are 1,200 saloons in New York," another newspaperman said.

"Rats," was the answer.

Some one had the temerity to ask him if he ever took a drink himself.

Everybody expected him to say "rats," but he did not.

"I don't know that there's any harm in one drink," he said. But he would not answer directly.

Then a photographer began clicking his camera.

Mr. Vosletad looked frightened, shielded his face with his hat, hesitated for a moment and bolted for the main companionway, pursued by reporters and photographers.

He ran into two passengers.

"Oh, rats," said Mr. Volstead. "I beg your pardon."

Gaining the shelter of his state room, he slammed the door and was seen no more.

BRIDGE TOLL OF TOURISTS IN DAY IS SURPRISING

Hundreds of tourists are daily passing through La Crosse and are crossing the Mississippi river over the local wagon bridge. The bridge tender aided by two boy scouts took a census Friday, August third of all the foreign cars coming and going. The total count of tourists and foreign cars over the bridge was 640 people and 200 cars. Of these 432 people in 122 cars from nineteen states went into Minnesota, while 208 people in sixty-eight cars from fifteen states came into Wisconsin. In this stream of overland traffic the most distant states of the union were represented — Florida and Washington. This record was strictly of tourists in foreign cars.

The thing of special interest that the record shows is that there are more tourists from the highly advertised west going east than there are of the east going west.

COOLIDGE MAY FIGHT STRIKE IN HARD COAL

perpetuity is not to be undertaken but upon profound necessity.

"The skill of the physician, the courage of the soldier, that which we call courage in all men, are not matters of hire and salary. Honor has been the reward for what they give. Public acclaim and the ceremonious recognition paid to returning heroes are not on account of their government pay but of the service and sacrifice they gave their country."

Takes Veto Seriously

And again from the same document:

"The most solemn obligation placed by the constitution on the executive is the power of veto."

While Mr. Coolidge's handling of the police strike in Boston has eclipsed some of his noteworthy utterances while governor of Massachusetts, there appears to be food for thought today in his address in October, 1919, to the republican state convention, as Boston, in which he referred to the police situation. Among other things of peculiar application today he said:

"That agitation and unrest which has been characteristic of the whole world since the war has had some manifestation here. There is a natural desire in every human mind to seek better conditions. Such a desire is altogether praiseworthy. There must, however, be discrimination in the methods employed.

"Wholesale criticism of everybody and everything does not necessarily exhibit statesmanlike qualities. Not all those who are working to better the condition of the people are bolsheviki or enemies of society. Not all those who are attempting to conduct a successful business are profiteers.

"What we need is thrift and industry. Let everybody keep at work. Profitable employment is the death blow to bolshevism and abundant production is disaster to the profiteers.

"Our salvation lies in putting forth greater effort, in manfully assuming our own burdens, rather than entertaining the pleasant delusion that they can be shifted to some other shoulders."

RADIO AMATEURS OF CITY WILL ATTEND CHICAGO MEETING

Interference Not So Great

The interference from amateur stations as lately determined by the United States Bureau of Standards is not nearly so great as was supposed. Broadcast listeners (termed BCL's by amateurs) as a rule do not know the international code and many extraneous noises even thunderstorm static are blamed upon the amateurs. The tests showed that less than four per cent of the interference (QRM) come from amateur stations. Most of the interference was caused by the high power commercial stations operating near the six-hundred meter wave length. Since the wave length band of broadcasting hub been broadened, these stations do not interfere with each other as much as heretofore but the lower wave stations still interfere greatly with each other. Another kind of interference is increasing as the number of regenerative sets increase. This type of interference is caused by the listeners themselves even with up to date radio-frequency amplification. With two sets listening to the same program and situated near each other and the detector tube oscillating, there is sure to be an unpleasant howl from both sets. This can only be eliminated by the proper operation and tuning of the set. Listeners who do not wish to muddle up their neighbors' programs can accomplish this by keeping their detector tubes just below the oscillating point.

The hours of quiet when the amateur station shall not transmit this winter will likely be from seven to ten p. m. as this has been approved over most of the country.

DEAREST OF ALL HIS POLICIES TO HARDING

ing. Mr. La Follette and his followers are no more disposed to "go along" with the man from Massachusetts than they were with the man from Ohio. They did not approve of the conservative type of mind and certainly Mr. Coolidge is a conservative. He has no patience with any "isms" other than Americanism.

Mixing Up the "Plain Language"

In the country about Philadelphia there are many families, calling themselves Quakers, using the plain language but not adhering to the plain clothes which at one time were the badge of the sect. Out of compliment tradespeople and others who have occasion to come in contact with the Quakers like to affect their language which leads to some amazing slips. Thomas Wimpenny, who died not long since, used to tell of one of those made by a cab driver. Recognizing Mr. Wimpenny as a member of the sect as the latter engaged him at the West Chester station, "Yes sir, yes sir. Take thou right up. Where's thou's baggage?"

THE WEEK

Governor John J. Blaine. In a statement the senator declared he had proof of actual crime.

Governor Blaine replied with a demand that Senator Severson disclose his evidence in order that he, the governor, might bring the offenders to justice, if offenders there were.

Severson replies by asserting that he will not submit the case to the governor because, by blocking investigation in the legislature the governor assumes political complicity in hence would be judging his own case. The senator ridicules the idea of taking the matter into court, and says that the legislature is the place to attend to it. He adds that if Governor Blaine calls a special session he will press again for his legislative inquiry.

In his rejoinder Governor Blaine criticizes Senator Severson for language which he says amounts to casting reflections upon every official and every woman in the state capitol, a reflection which he asserts will stand until specific people are named or the accusation withdrawn. He repeats his declaration that if the senator possesses the information which he claims, he is under moral obligations to divulge it to officials whose duty it is to prosecute crime. The governor makes it plain that he will regard the charges of Senator Severson as "gossip" until the senator presents proof.

* * * *

As to the smoke about the capitol, Senator Severson may be able to define his position. If there exists good reason to believe that offenses have been committed, the evidence of which is not all present, a legislative inquiry might serve the public interest even though its inspiration is in fact political strategy. But there is a difference between smoke and fire. Senator Severson declares that he knows positively of fire. He claims to have undisputable evidence that a crime was committed. His duty in that matter is plain, and has nothing to do with the legislature. That duty is to secure official action. If he chooses otherwise, he need not go to the governor. All he need do is to present his evidence to the district attorney of Dane county. His proper procedure would be to do just this, and then to press for an investigation of other alleged offenses of which he does not possess the proof. No man, and especially no public official, has a moral right to withhold from the prosecuting attorney positive evidence of the commission of a public offense, whether by a public official or a private citizen.

After having been opposed by Judge Gary of United States steel for years, the steel trust "voluntarily institutes the 8-hour day." As a means of equalization, a flat raise of 25 per cent to all classes of labor is announced.

When a great movement starts it wins of its own inertia. Judge Gary has had no change of heart. The 8-hour day movement has overwhelmed him, that is all. When he could import ignorant foreign labor, he could make it work 12 hours. But today the foreigner is posted almost before he arrives. Now he is more of a labor leader than his American cousin. And so it has come about that the 12-hour day can not hire hands in competition with the 8-hour day, since the latter has become widespread. Judge Gary had to hire men to operate the steel mills. If he couldn't hire them on a 12-hour basis, he must hire them upon an 8-hour basis. And that's that.

ARRIVE ON MOTOR TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Rose and two sons arrived here Thursday on a motor trip from Syracuse, New York They expect to spend a month at the home of Ernst Chitel, 814 West Avenue South. Mr. Rose's brother-in-law. Will Chitel, son of Mr. Chitel, is expected to arrive with his wife from Syracuse next week.

The Bees of the Bible

Not only does the Bible mention bees and honey no less than 30 times, but it also speaks of a "swarm of bees." So bees evidently had the habit of swarming way back there 5,000 years ago. Solomon evidently enjoyed honey, for he mentions it in six different places, and in three places advised his son to "eat honey." I believe he also knew something of both comb and extracted honey, for he speaks of eating his honey with the comb, and in Proverbs 24:13 he said: "My son, eat thou honey, because it is good and the honey comb, which is sweet to thy taste."

FAMOUS LONDON THEATER GIVES WAY TO PUSH CARTS

LONDON.—Shall it be "Opera" or "Onions" is the question agitating holders of business premises in Covent Garden Market. Business has grown to such an extent of late that dealers allege the Opera House, which is admittedly old and decaying, should be demolished and the site utilized for an extension of the congested market.

While people complain they cannot get to the opera with their motor-cars because the market wagons block the way, fruit and vegetable merchants assert that a food market is more important to the general public than "Faust" or "Tannhauser."

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR HARDING IN BAPTIST CHURCH

Trinity Church in Marion Will Have Services Today in Memory of Late President

MARION, O.—By The Associated Press.—Church friends of the late president, Warren G. Harding, will assemble in a special memorial service in his honor tomorrow at 10 a. m. in Trinity Baptist church, where he was a member.

The services will be conducted by Rev. Walter A. King of Columbus, Mr. Harding's former pastor. Hymns particularly preferred by the dead president will be sung. The pew which he occupied has been draped in black in honor of the deceased member.

Other Marion churches also will conduct memorial services for the former chief executive.

Refer Arrangements

Relatives of the late president still were without detailed information as to the funeral services here next Friday. These, according to Dr. George T. Harding, Jr. the president's brother, probably will not be completed until the middle of next week as efforts will be made to carry out the wishes of Mrs. Harding as far as possible. They are expected, however, to begin taking shape soon after the arrival here of military officers from Washington.

Miss Abigail Harding and Mrs. H. H. Votaw of Washington, sisters of the president, accompanied by the latter's husband, arrived here today. They went to the home of their father, Dr. George T. Harding, Sr., in East Center street where the funeral will be held.

It was announced today that neither the president's father nor other members of the family would meet the funeral train as it passed through Ohio, and accompany the body to Washington. It previously had been planned that some members of the family would accompany the train east.

Will Be Taken to Farm

Mrs. Harding, on her arrival here next Thursday will be taken to White Oaks farm, the home of Brigadier General Sawyer, the personal physician of the president. Mrs. Harding will make her home with General Sawyer for a time at least after the burial, Dr. Carl W. Sawyer, his son, said today, but he did not know whether it would be a permanent arrangement.

The management of the Marion hotel, the largest in the city, announced today that the entire building had been reserved for next Thursday and Friday for the funeral party coming from Washington. Guests already in the hotel will be cared for in private homes.

JOURNALIST'S LITTLE JOKE

A joke has been played on the keepers of the Louvre Museum by a Paris journalist. Some days ago he placed a statuette of the mock Mayor of Montmartre, M. Jules Depaquit, which was recently exhibited in the Salon des Humorists, on a vacant pedestal in one of the rooms of the Louvre dedicated to Roman statuary.

The anachronism of a statuette with top hat and gaiters among the antiques does not seem to have excited the suspicion of the attendants or the curiosity of the visitors. No notice appears to have been taken of it until the joker attempted to remove it, when there was another story to tell. Since "La Joconde" was stolen some years ago, a strict watch has been kept upon the precious objects preserved in the Louvre, and no sooner had the journalist lifted the unauthorized exhibit from its temporary resting place than he was violently seized by an excited guardian and hailed before the Museum authorities. It was more than an hour before he was allowed to depart and restore M. Depaquit to the Republic of Montmartre.

DIGNITY AND SIMPLICITY TO MARK SERVICES

it has announced that there will be a brief burial service.

Unless Mrs. Harding desires it, no congressional committee will accompany the funeral party to Ohio. This decision was reached tentatively Saturday at conferences at the capitol, participated in by a number of senate and house leaders. Comparatively few members of congress are in Washington, but all have been notified formally of the time of the services here and as many as can do so will come.

Friday a Day of Prayer

President Coolidge halted Saturday in the preparations for the funeral services to sign a proclamation announcing the death of President Harding and calling upon the country to observe Friday, Aug. 10, the day of interment, as a day of mourning and prayer. He also signed executive orders for the closing of all government departments from the time of the arrival of the funeral party from San Francisco Tuesday until after the day of burial.

Other executive orders signed by the chief executive provide that there shall be no official entertainments until next December 1, and that formal calls of organizations or of officials in a body at the white house will be deferred until after Sept 3, the end of the thirty days' period of national mourning. During those thirty days flags on federal buildings throughout the country on naval ships and at navy stations and army posts will remain at half mast.

As the funeral train moved eastward from San Francisco Saturday, the army and navy paid its honors to their dead commander-in-chief with the booming of salutes.

Throughout the day messages of condolence to Mrs. Harding continued to pour into the white house and the state department. Those received at the state department came from all parts of the world.

RELICS HUNDREDS OF YEARS OLD ARE OWNED IN THE CITY

Old Danish Book, One of First Printed, and Ancient Bowl Owned by Andrew Mallem

Rev. H. G. Magelssen has in his possession two relics of priceless value. The relics which are the property of Andrew Mallem clerk at Peter Newburg's clothing store are family heirlooms. One of them is over 400 years old; the other is 300 years old. The relics have been carefully preserved for generations and are still in good condition, despite the fact that they have been handled repeatedly.

The first of the relics is an old Danish book of sermons printed in 1564 just 96 years after the death of Gutenberg, inventor of the press. The publisher, King Christian III was the first to print a book in Denmark, this book of sermons is undoubtedly the first publication of any kind after the Bible to be published in that country. It represents also the first stages of development toward a standard form of written or printed language. Instead of having a system of punctuation marks, such as the period, comma, semi-colon, etc., the words and sentences are separated by a slanting line which made the entire system of punctuation. The language itself, while fundamentally the same as the present one, differs the same as the English language of Shakespeare's time differs from the present English language. Due to the enormous expense required to print an edition, only the wealthiest man in the kingdom could afford to publish anything. The wealthiest man in the kingdom was invariably the king, and so the publication was made through the king.

The book to some extent is a political manuscript in that it marks the period of a bloody religious war in which King Christian III introduced Lutheranism into Denmark. The influence of Martin Luther, the editor of the book, was largely instrumental in bringing about the complete reformation.

An Older Relic

The second of the relics is 400 years old. It is a wooden drinking bowl made by a viking ancestor. The reason that it is generally supposed the bowl is older than the book is accounted for by a peculiar custom. The bowl, according to the script on the outside, marks a large wedding celebration of a viking chieftain. It was the custom at a celebration for the entire clan or neighborhood to gather at an appointed spot to drink beer and hear the exploits and adventures of the pillaging expeditions along the coast. The entire clan would sit around in an immense circle and listen while the beer bowl was passed from mouth to mouth, each individual taking a goodly draught of beer from the same bowl. These bowls were kept for many generations, handed down to posterity. This bowl still belongs to a Mallem; the last of the house of Mallem.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL OUTLOOK

BY STUART P. WEST
(Special Correspondent, Tribune)
Copyright, 1923.

NEW YORK.—How the financial outlook will be affected by the change of presidents is the question of most immediate interest at the close of the week. But in and out of Wall street, while there is some difference of opinion, the preponderant feeling is that President Coolidge will do what he says he proposes to do, namely, follow out the Harding program. This being the case, the uncertainties with which the business community has been confronted all along, are neither increased nor diminished.

Stuart P. West.

Situation Abroad Acute

The other factors in the situation remain about as they stood a week ago. When the French and Belgian governments rejected the efforts of Great Britain to effect a compromise on German reparations, they did nothing more than the markets of the world had expected. A break in the entente is a possibility which must be considered.

At the moment the European situation does not seem quite as serious as it appeared last week at this time. Germany is doing business as usual, that is, everywhere outside of the Ruhr. New low records for French and Belgian francs emphasize that the international money markets—leaving all sentiment or sympathy out of the question—are on the side of England in her present attitude. They believe that the French venture in the Ruhr was a mistake.

Wheat Still a Problem

Among the domestic problems the most formidable are still the unfavorable position of the wheat farmer and the comparatively high costs of production in industry generally. It is certain that with the re-assembling of congress the proposition that the government use its credit for taking up and storing surplus wheat until the growers are able to secure better prices, will be vigorously pushed. Legislation along this line, however, ill-advised it may appear from an economic standpoint will be very popular with the politicians, and as a measure of political expediency is quite likely to go through.

But of course this is only putting off dealing with the main difficulty, which is that wheat production the world over has been running far ahead of demand. The Canadian crop is the most notable instance. Before the war it used to average something less than 200,000,000 bushels. In 1922 it rose to 400,000,000 and this year promises to be close to 500,000,000 bushels. Europe is producing much more than it did a year ago and its needs are consequently much smaller. The Indian crop is up too, and it looks as if Russia, after nine years absence, is about to re-enter the markets as a competitor. Under these circumstances withholding as proposed, 200,000,000 bushels of American wheat from the market is not going to afford any lasting remedy. Eventually in order to compete successfully with lower cost foreign wheat, the American farmer will have to decide to devote less acreage to the wheat crop and go in more largely for other crops in which there is less rivalry and a better opportunity for profit.

Other Crops Beside Wheat

The way Wall street has been discussing the wheat situation and its bearing upon the future buying power of the agricultural states, one might suppose that wheat was the only crop to be considered. As it is the wheat harvest represents less than seven percent of the total output of the farms. The agricultural department estimated a month ago, taking prices as they stood on July 1, that the total value of all the crops this year would exceed $1,000,000,000 that of 1922 and by $3,000,000,000 that of 1921. This, after all, is the main criterion for judging the farmers' capacity to buy.

No Basis for Wage Increases

There is no question about wages being abnormally high in various lines. The main contention of those who look at the future pessimistically is that labor costs cannot be brought down without a period of depression.

If the country has reached, as is reasonable to suppose, the limit of wage increases, the question then becomes whether manufacturers and merchants can maintain a scale of prices that will not discourage buyers and yet leave an adequate profit margin. This is to be tested in the woolen industry where to match last spring's wage advance, quotations on next spring's line of goods have been raised eleven percent. It is to be tested in the steel trade when, changing over from the twelve to the eight hour working day, the companies will endeavor to pass the extra cost over to the consumers. The outcome cannot be judged ahead of time.

Railroad Outlook Unsettled

The railroads, of course, have a problem of their own which does not belong to other enterprises. They are not free to raise the price of transportation to meet increase in costs. On the contrary, it is altogether probable that the demand for a reduction in agricultural freight rates will prove in the next congress, too strong to resist. Wall street has evidently been looking ahead to this possibility in its treatment of the stocks of roads which even under present conditions are either not covering fixed charges or in cases where dividends are being paid are not earning but a slight margin in excess. In these instances any lowering of freight rates would spell receivership for some and the passing of dividends for others, unless the supreme court stepped in and decided, regardless of the pressure from the farmer element, that railroads must be allowed to charge enough to bring them in a reasonable return on their investment. It is this which the railroads are relying upon to happen.

CHILD MEETS DEATH AS AUTO TURNS OVER

MARSHFIELD, Wis.—Dolores, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Bast, was instantly killed late on Friday when the family car, also occupied by the girl's parents and twin sister, plunged into a ditch, 8 miles west of the city, and overturned, pinning the occupants beneath.

Mrs. Bast is at St. Joseph's hospital here with skull injuries while the other two occupants are being treated for minor bruises.

WAUSAU MAN FOURTH OF FAMILY DEAD IN ACCIDENT

WAUSAU, Wis.—W. H. Bressert died on Friday of injuries received when his chest was crushed by the wheels of a loaded wagon which passed over him when he stumbled and accidentally fell. He is the fourth brother to meet death by accident. Two brothers were drowned when small boys and another fell from a scaffold a few years ago, breaking his neck.

FLOWERS PLACED ON THE GRAVE OF LA CROSSE POETESS

Friends Remember the Anniversary of Mrs. Helen A. Mannville

Friday, August 3, on the eighty-fourth anniversary of her birth, the grave of Mrs. Helen A. Mannville in Oak Grove cemetery was covered with flowers by Mrs. Flora E. Lowry, Mrs. George Hauser and Miss Josephine Schmauch. Mrs. Mannville is numbered among the best known of western Wisconsin writers of poetry.

Mrs. Mannville was born in New Berlin, N. Y. She was married in La Crosse to M. M. Mannville. She died in South America at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Marion Mannville Pope, who brought her body to La Crosse and interred it last Thanksgiving day, beside the body of her father. The grave lies east of the Washburn monument in a lot which is marked Wood. The stone is topped with the statue of an angel in a pose of meditation.

Mrs. Pope now lives at 452 Greenwood Ave., Trenton, N. J. In a letter of July 30, 1923, Mrs. Pope writes the following recollections of her mother:

"She was a wonderful woman to whom fate denied a great deal, and robbed largely of the domestic happiness that should have been the reward of such goodness and patience and angelic disposition.

"My cousin, James E. Fraser, the sculptor, still raves over her beauty. 'She had,' he said to me the other day, 'the most wonderful eyes ever set in a human head. Never in the world were there others like them.'

"Mother published one book of verse in 1874, 'Heart Echoes.' It has been out of print for close to half a century. I have found an extra copy and sent it to you registered to add to your collection of Wisconsin authors. You are entitled to it."

The book, "Heart Echoes" was published in La Crosse 49 years ago in September, when Mrs. Manville was 35 years old.

The autograph reads: "Helen A. Mannville's daughter takes great pleasure in presenting this volume to Flora E. Lowry.

(Signed) "Marion Manville Pope,"
"N. Y. July, 1923."

Mrs. Mannville wrote both prose and verse. "Her poems number nearly 2000 although not all were published. In general terms it may be said that her poems are the poetic expression of moods of musing and meditation. Their tone is subdued, quiet and feminine. No attempts are made to rouse the passions or depress the sensibilities."

Local Man Becomes Foot Comfort Expert

Mr. Wm. Strauss, Jr., returns after Taking Special Course in Foot Anatomy and Foot Comfort Practice Under Direction of Wm. M. Scholl.

"It is no longer necessary for persons afflicted with foot troubles to wear 'freaky' shapes or oversized shoes." This was the statement of Mr. Wm. Strauss, Jr., of Strauss' Shoe Store, who has just returned from Chicago where he has been taking a special Post Graduate course in Practipedics (the science of giving foot comfort) given by the American School of Practipedics.

Mr. Strauss said that all people can enjoy complete foot comfort while wearing the smart, neat fitting footwear of the prevailing mode. In many cases, he said, it is possible to actually wear a smaller size than ever, if the proper foot comfort appliance is used.

In speaking of the course he has taken in Practipedics, he said he was exceptionally well pleased with it. He now feels confident that this scientific training will enable him to give the customers of his store a far better service than ever before.

Mr. Strauss, in explaining the course of study he had taken, said that it included a great deal of practical dissecting and clinical work with numerous lectures by leading specialists, including Dr. Wm. M. Scholl, the internationally recognized authority. It also included a study of foot anatomy, foot troubles and their causes, the diagnosis of foot troubles and their correction through the use of orthopedic appliances. The consideration of modern shoe fitting methods with reference to foot needs and appearance was also a feature.

Mr. Strauss makes no charge for his examination of feet or for his expert advice. Naturally he is kept busy giving relief to those who come to him with foot discomforts. Nothing is too simple or too serious for him. Whether it is a mere corn or a pronounced case of flat foot, he will give it the same careful attention. He can be seen daily at Strauss' Shoe Store, 320 Pearl street.

Leaving Your Children An Education

IF you wish to be certain that your children shall have the advantages of a higher educational training, whether you are here or not, one of the following suggestions may be of value to you:

1. In your will you can specify that a certain amount of the funds from your estate shall be held in trust by this company for the purpose of defraying the educational expenses of your children.

2. You can set aside securities or other property now in a voluntary trust to be used for the same purpose.

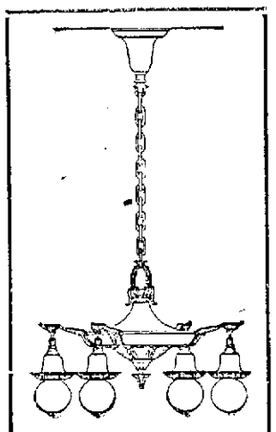

3. You can place a certain amount of life insurance in trust with this company, either a specific policy, or a part of the total of your policies.

The officers of our Trust Department will be glad to discuss these various methods with you, entirely without obligation on your part.

Our booklet "Safeguarding Your Family's Future," makes some suggestions which may prove most helpful to you. Send for a copy.

Magna Charta as a Shrine

12 Major Improvements at No Advance in Price

Fifty thousand Jewett owners testify that Jewett Six is the most car for the money that has ever been built! Now—the NEW JEWETT SIX tops all former achievements!

Here are twelve important improvements which add sensibly to Jewett Six's value, sturdiness, comfort and completeness. Read what the NEW JEWETT SIX now gives you in addition to its established superiorities. More than ever Jewett Six now dominates the $1000 class.

1. Large brake drums. Now 14 inches in diameter. Added strength, absolute safety. 18.21 pounds per square inch of braking surface. More than any car its size.
2. Heavier, stronger wheels. More bolts. Larger spokes. A 25% greater margin of safety than ever offered in a car this size.
3. Positive pressure chassis lubrication, using oil not grease. Avoids the mess of grease cups. Masters squeaks. Insures long life in all working chassis parts.
4. Improved valve mechanism—runs in bath of oil—is practically noiseless and will long outwear usual design. Experienced motorists particularly will approve.
5. Improved Rayfield carburetor. Increases gasoline mileage about 10%. Gives smoother, faster action in get-away with no sign of "fuss."
6. New position of gear-shift lever; now immediately under driver's hand—no reaching.
7. New type of spark and throttle control. Smart in appearance; safer; more convenient. A distinct improvement that appeals to all drivers.
8. New instrument board assembling instruments in oval panel. More convenient; quicker, easier vision day or night. Compact; neater in appearance.
9. New type non-glaring reflectors in headlights. Legal everywhere. Reduces annoyance for oncoming drivers. Provides wonderful illumination.
10. Thicker and more comfortable upholstery in open models. Easy spring action, soft cushion effect, a delight to women.
11. Deeper front seats with back tilted to give easier driving posture; longer leg room. A really restful, easy car to ride in.
12. New pattern velour upholstery on standard Sedan models. Makes a rich looking car.

In addition to these twelve improvements, and refinements too numerous to mention, you get in this NEW JEWETT SIX the same sparkling performance that won a nation. Its full 50 horsepower Paige-built motor fills the hood. It drives from 2 to 60 miles an hour in high. Picks up from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds, in high gear. Passes most any car on any hill.

High-pressure, hollow crankshaft oiling system—the same as used on the big Paige and other top-quality cars—insures long motor life. Two gallons of oil per minute are forced through all main and connecting rod bearings.

For a year and a half Jewett Six has been out-performing other cars. Jewett Six buyers are enthusiastic. Now—with 12 important improvements, and a host of refinements the NEW JEWETT SIX is far and away the most sensational value the market affords.

Drive one of these NEW JEWETT SIXES. Let your wife drive. All Jewett dealers are ready to show you. A telephone call will arrange a demonstration. Be among the first! 614-A

In Memory Of Our President

Warren G. Harding

It is hard for us living in this world of stern materialism to reconcile ourselves to the harsh blade of the reaper. We had settled ourselves to the fact of the announced improvement of our nation's chief when like a bolt from the sky he passes from us.

Writers far and wide will soon take pen and commemorate the man that WAS. Let us think of the man that IS for after all Harding the BODY has passed but Harding THE MAN STILL LIVES.

Warren G. Harding typifies the true American, a fighter, battling his way since boyhood to the pinnacle of his ambitions, sticking steadfastly to his honest convictions and fighting for them.

Like all great men he has many friends and many enemies; there are few of us loved alike by all, but of a man who is kind, just and honest there can be no criticism.

Coming into office in an extreme period he has done more for the sane reconstruction of this war racked country of ours than most of us realize.

Let us not mourn for the BODY of Harding that was, but let us bow in reverence and homage to the TRUE, EVERLASTING LIFE OF THE MAN THAT IS—WARREN G. HARDING.

STAGNANT WATER IS FIRST DEFENSE OF MOSQUITO ARMY

Marshes and Water in Old Receptacles are Held Ideal Culex "Incubators"

KEEP HOMES WELL SCREENED THEN FORGET THE ENEMY

City Dumps also Source for Prolific Breeding of Pests

HOW many voices do you contribute to the culex chorus?

The whanging, thin drawn note of the culex has been disturbing residents of La Crosse who live near the rivers, marshes and public dumps this summer and has brought appeals in many cases on "What to do for mosquito bites," and what to do to prevent the mosquito flights to A. M. Murphy, health commissioner.

Means of prevention for those who dislike the mosquito are given by Mr. Murphy in the order of their importance:

First, empty all containers of water on the premises.

Second, screen porches and windows with 10 gauge screening.

Then—forget about mosquitos.

"Millions of mosquitos can hatch in a broken bottle containing only about a cupful of rain water," said Mr. Murphy. "The first step La Crosse householders should take to rid the city of the mosquito pest is to examine the premises for water containers.

"Sprinkling cans, rain barrels, broken receptacles and old tubs offer an inviting retreat to the culex, which is the formal name for the mosquito.

Female Most Deadly

"The mosquito is essentially a house product. While stagnant pools, marshes and slow running streams are responsible for much of the breeding of mosquitos, the half filled containers in the backyards are the chief breeding places."

But in spite of its tantalizing war cry, the bite of the female mosquito—for it is only the female of the mosquito species which is carnivorous—is harmless in Wisconsin. A little ammonia water in very weak solution or a solution of baking soda is sufficient to stop the irritation of a mosquito bite received in this section of the country.

The anopheles, or malaria carrying mosquito, is also present in Wisconsin, at least this section of the state, but its bite is harmless here. Unlike its relative, the culex, the anopheles slips up quietly and its bite is neither anticipated nor felt. In hot swampy parts of the country this type of mosquito is the chief carrier of malaria, the disease of the tropics.

No Cause for Fear

"There is nothing to be feared from the mosquito that makes its appearance in La Crosse this time of the year," said Mr. Murphy. "It is an annoyance, that's all.

"I have been advocating for some time now that some of the large business houses install incinerators and dispose of refuse in that way instead of hauling it to the city dumps. Some of the refuse from these places when dumped at Isle La Plume and other dumps is enough to feed all mosquitos and rats in this section of the country for weeks.

"Another menace to the city, besides the mosquitos, is the hordes of rats that infest the city dumps. There are thousands of them and they live on garbage that could be destroyed in homes and in business places if they had incinerators."

LA CROSSE YOUTHS HAVE OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN TO FLY

City Allowed Two Candidates by National Aeronautic Society to Flying Schools

La Crosse is included among the cities of the country asked to send young men to leading flying schools throughout the country where they will be taught to operate airplanes.

The National Aeronautic association has arranged with leading flying schools in the country, whereby a large number of men, 17 years old and over, will be given an opportunity to fly without cost of tuition. La Crosse will have two student flyers, on the basis of one to each 25,000 population. These scholarships are to be earned by candidates arousing public sentiment in the community in support of national aeronautics and effectively tying up that sentiment, through membership in the National Aeronautic association, with the nation-wide campaign now under way by the association, to put "America First in the Air."

Men to be nominated, if under age, must have parents or guardians' consent to learn to fly. They also must be physically fit to fly, and must be clean-cut young men with high standing in their community.

Names of candidates should be sent to George Keenan, at the La Crosse High school.

Germany boasts of 37,430 farmers' cooperatives societies with a total membership of 4,652,125.

Light from the Pole Star takes 54 years to reach the earth.

THE WALRUS

(BY C. A. W.)

One of the best little bits of gossip I heard during the past week was that Engineer Tucker of the Minnesota state highway commission was in the city making arrangements with owners of summer cottages at Eagle Bluff to begin constructing retaining walls along the bluff side of the new road to be built from La Moille to La Crosse. Earlier in the year when the Minnesota legislature failed to pass that $20,000,000 road bond bill, word came that work on the construction of a double width modern highway over route No. 3 across the river would have to be abandoned. The opinion prevailed here that this meant a delay of two years in the building of this road. But according to the dope heard last week Commissioner Babcock has found enough money in his fund to do the grading and building of culverts and retaining walls on No. 3 from La Moille to La Crescent this year. This means that the road will be finished next year, unless all signs fail. When this highway is completed from the Twin cities to La Crosse the tourist traffic through this city during the outing months will form a continuous procession. Will La Crosse have sufficient hotel accommodations to take care of this moving army of tourists?

* * * *

Another encouraging sign indicating a revival of commercial traffic on the upper Mississippi was seen the other day when a St. Paul newspaper related that Henry Ford's representative in Washington had closed a deal whereby the automobile manufacturer comes into possession of twenty acres of land fronting on the river below his new plant at St. Paul. At first glance this may not appear to the ordinary reader as an announcement of any great interest in La Crosse. But when one learns that Mr. Ford sought this land to give him a site for river terminals, the news takes on significance. What it means is that Mr. Ford is rapidly completing his plans to put into service on the upper river a fleet of barges and tow-boats to convey parts of Ford automobiles from his new plant in St. Paul to his assembling plant in St. Louis. What these boats will carry on their up trips is unknown, but it seems highly probable that the bargers will not run light on the return journey. Our best guess is that the barges will be loaded with coal on the voyage up stream. La Crosse may find its real opportunity to get cheaper coal via the river inside of the next two years. I still have a vision of a real terminal, with docks, power loading and unloading devices and a belt line railroad on the river front here. It seems mighty slow in coming, but may not be so very far away.

* * * *

Dr. J. M. Furstman, who was La Crosse's first full time health commissioner and who is now safeguarding the public health in Peoria, has raised a furore in Illinois, according to a leading magazine, by announcing that weighing and measuring of children by school nurses shall cease. Dr. Furstman abandons the practice because it worries parents. This magazine, in criticism of the mandate of Peoria's health commissioner, points out that vaccination of children also is a source of worry to parents, but rather essential in safeguarding the little ones' health. "Doc" Furstman seems to have started something that is calculated to raise quite a noise before all the echoes finally subside, even though Peoria folks may be entirely satisfied with his new regulation.

Charley Harzor exhibited a curiosity the other day when he called several friends down to his store to show them a genuine buffalo robe. Charley is known as some hunter but finally had to 'fess up that he did not shoot this king of the western plains. It was obtained from a buffalo ranch near Pierre, S. D., where buffaloes are raised for commercial purposes. Time was when buffalo overcoats and robes were quite common hereabouts, but few citizens now possess these beautiful brown coverings. Would suggest now, that Charley buy a chain and padlock or rent one of those big safety deposit boxes.

Two La Crosse tourists who are having the time of their life this summer are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lougeville, who are making a long western trip in their car. The last word received from them was at the Coeur d'Alene tourist camp in Idaho after they had finished a delightful trip through Yellowstone park. With 2500 miles to their credit they had had no car trouble except punctures. They were on their way to Mount Ranier national park and plan to go on down the west coast to Los Angeles, returning home over the Santa Fe trail. Mr. and Mrs. Lougeville have two dogs with them, who serve as constant and faithful companions during their nights in camp. They had a surprise at the Coeur d'Alene camp when they found that Harry Erum, formerly of La Crosse, is in charge of that big camping ground, which is nightly the rendezvous for hundreds of persons touring in that vicinity.

* * * *

Speaking of tourists reminds me of hearing about an unique camping outfit which F. J. Noetzel of Milwaukee, formerly of La Crosse, has devised so that his wife can accompany him on his auto sales trips through northern Wisconsin and Michigan, at a minimum of cost. By removing the two front seats at night and placing in position a collapsible cot for two, the interior of the car is made into as comfortable and as wholesome a sleeping place as could be desired. The seat is removed and the cot inserted in its place without tools, and in five minutes. The tarapaulin covering the entire car, makes the interior of the car just one room in this camping suite. When folded it is carried on the left running board alongside the folded cot. A trunk in the rear has two compartments, one for stored food and cooking utensils, the other for dishes and groceries. An ice box is carried on the left running board for cream, butter, meats and vegetables. "This outfit gives us all the comforts of home, with the added satisfaction of knowing that we are having a real good time and saving money at it," said Mr. Noetzel. "It ordinarily costs me from $35 to $40 a week on the road. Now two of us get along prosperously on $4 a day."

What came pretty close to being a piping, jolly fish story from Joseph McGrath—you know the kind, big fish an' everything, actually turned out to be true. La Moille was the setting for the story. Joe was anchored with his mind not on fish but more likely on that recent suspect whose report at headquarters was a queer story. Entirely engrossed in his speculations on the many situations of the case, his reverie was interrupted by a vicious jerk of the line. Joe tried hopelessly to retrieve the fast disappearing spoils with an ineffectual grab at the river hound pole, line, hook, and fish. Another fisherman, loath to see the big catch lost, jumped in after the prize; grabbed the pole and hauled in an eight pound catfish. Joe got the fish, so it isn't a fish story.

Former Mayor O. J. Sorenson, of La Crosse, in Madison on business, recalled his boyhood days in Madison. He was born on the site of the university heating plant on University avenue. As a boy Mr. Sorenson said he watched masons build the present postoffice building. He also remembered the time when the old hook and ladder truck and fire engine were quartered on the first floor of the city hall. "I remember well on several occasions when I rang the fire bell," commented Mr. Sorenson. "I consider the chimney on the university heating plant as a monument on my birthplace."

When Captain and Mrs. Ryan of the Salvation Army return from their three weeks' vacation at Rockford, Ill., about August 21, they expect to receive notification that they have been transferred to some other point in the Wisconsin and Upper Peninsula of Michigan district. Captain Ryan has been in charge of the local corps of the Salvation Army for two years and has made a splendid record here as a social worker and citizen. The affairs of the Army have been conducted in businesslike, systematic manner and the head of the corps has been diligent and painstaking in all his work. Mr. and Mrs. Ryan have many friends here who will regret their departure for other fields but will rejoice with them in any advancement which this transfer may bring.

AFTER TWO YEAR PURSUIT, MAIL THIEF GOES TO JAIL

PORT ARTHUR, Ont.—(By the Associated Press)—After a two-year hunt across the continent and into the United States, ending with his arrest in Hamilton, Ont., last week, William R. Fulford, former employe of the local postal depot pleaded guilty to the theft of a mail sack containing $11,400, and was sentenced to serve three years in Stony Mountain penitentiary.

The crime was committed on April 30, 1921. Fulford followed a mail truck to the depot, and when the mail carrier stepped into the railway office to inquire, he took it from the truck and carried it to a nearby field, cutting open the bag and extracting the package of money.

OLD LUMBER BILL AND ELECTION TICKET FOUND IN BUILDING

Relics of Early Days Discovered When Frame Store Building is Torn Down

Two interesting relics of early days in La Crosse were found in the walls of the old frame building at the southwest corner of Fourth and Jay streets, recently torn down to provide a site for a new Standard Oil company service station. Both relics are now in the possession of Harry Taggart.

One is a bill from the John Paul Lumber company to Sebastian Meininger for lumber used, undoubtedly in the erection of the building. It is dated December 6, 1871. One item is for 260 feet of stock boards at $20 per thousand. The other item on the bill is 56 feet of cornice boards at $16 per thousand. The total bill was only $6.09.

Had Six Yards

The letter head of the John Paul Lumber company shows that the firm at that time operated yards at La Crosse, Rushford, Lanesboro, Spring Valley, Brownsdale and Brownsville. The offices and mills were on Front street between King and Cass, on the site occupied by the tractor company building and now used by the American Cigar company.

The other relic is an election ticket, headed "Liberal Reform Ticket." The candidates for office on the ticket follow:

For mayor—James J. Hogan.
For clerk—John C. Miller.
For justice of the peace for the city at Large—H. E. Hubbard.
For treasurer—George Scharpf.
For assessor—John B. Jungen.
Third ward—Alderman, Charles Michel; supervisor, D. D. McMillan; justice of the peace, Chris. Koenig; constable, I. L. Usher.

The Australian ballot system was not in operation in those days, it is recalled, and in every voting precinct each party had tickets to hand out to voters. The tickets were of different colors and the ballot clerks and inspectors knew just how every man voted.

Old Cooper Sign

E. H. Derr has another relic of early days, found in the attic of the building just razed. It is a wooden sign "Cooper Shop," which in the 70's occupied a prominent position in front of the building. This inscription was painted over another sign, "State Street House," indicating the same board had served to advertise a hostelry in the rear of the Hotel La Crosse before it came into possession of Mr. Meininger. In later years the building at Fourth and Jay streets became a saloon.

Wrecking of the three old store buildings at this corner attracted crowds each day. Citizens stopped to admire the clear timbers and lumber used in the construction of the buildings, erected over a half century ago. This lumber was in a wonderful state of preservation, much of it appearing to have but recently come from the mills.

"You'd have to pay a lot of money for lumber like that nowadays," and "they don't sell stuff like that now," were remarks frequently heard.

CRYSTAL FALLS, Mich. — Thad Waite, Iron county sheriff, whose removal from office was asked on charges of drunkenness and neglect of duty, is to retain his office on the specific condition that he must make a thorough housecleaning of his force of deputies. This was the agreement reached with J. E. Converse, assistant attorney general.

BERRY CROP IS LIGHT

BIRCHWOOD, Wis.—Due to the lack of rain in the growing season, the wild berry crop throughout this locality is exceptionally small this year. Raspberries and blackberries are exceptionally scarce. Many families depend upon the wild fruit crops for the winter supply of preserves.

OLDEST FORD IN LA CROSSE IS STILL IN RUNNING ORDER

Fifteen years ago this brand new Ford was the herald, on the streets of La Crosse, of the coming of a mighty industry. At that time the wonder and marvel of the invention drew only dignified praises of admiration for the new automobile and glances of envy for the few owners. That was before the onrushing tide of new makes of cars shoved the proud owners of the cars into the class of tin lizzie punishers. B. L. Johnson for years a local paint and paper retailer, in 1908 bought it from "Pete" Hofweber, who had at that time the local agency for the Ford cars. He operated and ran the car for ten years before selling it to John Hofweber, who claims that the car is still in fair running condition and all that it needs, to be seen on the streets again is some gas, water, oil, and a few minor repairs.

HATCHERY EXPERIMENTING TO DETERMINE WHAT SIZE FISH TO PLANT IN STREAMS

Up at the state fish hatchery at Bayfield, Wisconsin conservation authorities are trying to solve the much discussed question as to how many fish survive when they are planted from the hatcheries in lakes and streams.

The experiments have been going on since the fall of 1921 and it will be another year before the work is concluded. So far as the experiments have gone they have proven successful, due largely to the natural condition of the small lake in which the experiment is being made.

Brook trout are being used in the experiments. The lake covers an area of from six to eight acres and adjoins the hatchery. Its natural formation is such that it can be drained dry, which was done in the fall of 1921 and all fish taken from it, after which it was refilled with water, which had a depth of 14 inches to eight feet. Then 2,000 fingerling brook trout were released in the lake and after that Superintendent Robert L. Ripple saw to it that the young fish were properly fed. At the other end of the lake is a stream, half a mile long. Bulkheads control the water so that fish in the stream cannot enter the lake, except in the case of overflow, which happens now and then. In this stream 3,000 more trout of the same fingerling size were planted.

Count Fish After a Year

At the end of a year the lake was drained, all fish taken out and of those planted 1,321 remained. From an inch to two they had grown to seven to nine inches in length. It is fair to assume that some of the trout in the stream got into the lake during the seasonal overflows, but even figuring those remaining on the basis of 5,000 planted, the showing of survivors was good, because the trout are great cannibals and no doubt many were devoured by the "fittest" of the lot. Then there are many kingfishers, herons and other birds that undoubtedly enjoyed many early brook trout breakfasts.

Seek to Know Best Size

The experiment now going on is to determine the best size of trout to plant. Once more the lake has been drained and 20,000 brook trout planted. This time fingerlings were not used, but the fish in fry size were turned into the lake. Next fall when the fish will be taken from the lake, it will be learned how many survive. When the count is made two questions will have been answered. First, how many fish survive when planted, and, second, which size is the better to plant?

Good Year for Bass

This year has been an especially good one for the natural propagation of black bass in Wisconsin, announces Superintendent of Fisheries Brayton O. Webster.

"The weather conditions were just right," he said, "any many bass were hatched in the lakes. With those we are planting this year from the state hatcheries, the number of bass ought to increase considerably. I am sure our fishermen will be glad to get the news."

Cultivating Salmon

The authorities hope to plant enough salmon in Lake Superior so that fish can be taken on a commercial basis. The Wisconsin state hatcheries have an exchange arrangement by which annually the state of Washington ships for Lake Superior planting 200,000 salmon eggs, while this state sends west 100,000 rainbow trout eggs which are planted in Washington streams. It will probably be years before salmon are caught in large numbers in Lake Superior, but the authorities are hopeful of results, and year after year the salmon eggs are hatched and the fry released. Some years ago a small number of steel-head salmon-trout were introduced in Lake Superior and Michigan, but it is only occasionally that one is now caught.

Hatched Many Millions

Last year over 230,000,000 fish were hatched in the 12 Wisconsin hatcheries and Supt. Webster estimates that about the same amount will be propagated this year. However, there will be no young muskies for planting this year. The fishermen who were sent out to seine muskies during the early spring were out of luck and failed to bring back any muskie eggs. They caught only two fish in the waters selected. But there will be the usual fry of other fish, including brook, rainbow and brown trout, lake trout, black bass, wall-eyed pike, whitefish, salmon, roach, catfish, silver trout, croppies, sunfish, pickerel and white bass. Most of these species are now being planted in all parts of the state. Trout and bass seem to be most in demand. The brown trout seems to be the aristocrat of the fish family. Last year 9,250,000 of the brook, rainbow and brown trout were hatched. The bass numbered about 1,500,000.

For some years the fish commission has tried to introduce lake trout into the inland lakes of the state, but the work was only partly successful and a change of planting is now being made. It has been learned that the lake trout needs certain food and deep cold water, and hereafter they will be planted only in lakes where the trout was once native. Trout lake, Black oak lake and Stone lake have proven successful and these lakes are being stocked.

Wisconsin raises most of the fish eggs it hatches every year. It buys only about 2,000,000 eggs a year, while Michigan buys from 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 eggs annually.

There are a number of concerns in the country and at least three large ones in Wisconsin that raise brook trout eggs, fry and full grown brook trout. Brook trout eggs are worth about $1,000 to $1,500 a million. Brook trout running about three to the pound sell for about 80 cents to $1 a pound. It doesn't always follow when you eat a fine brook trout in a restaurant or hotel that some keen old angler caught the fish. It may be a hand-fed trout raised at one of our Badger brook trout farms.

SLACKER NOW ASKS IF U. S. CALLED HIM TO COLORS IN 1918

John Doe Writes to Judge C. W. Hunt to Get Information; Posted as Deserter

SIX years after he was called to the colors in the first draft, a man, who will be called John Doe, because that isn't his name, and who was posted as a deserter by the La Crosse draft board, has written to Judge C. W. Hunt, who was clerk of the board, to learn whether he had ever been called for service in the world war. The judge received the letter from Doe last week.

After the draft board had been organized, among the first persons registered in La Crosse county were those in the county jail andcounty institutions. John Doe, a transient, was in the county jail on a vagrancy charge. He was registered and got a number in the 300's. He was released before the drawing of the draft numbers took place.

Doe's number was among the first drawn. Notice was sent to his last known place of residence but he could not be found. Later, the draft board located him in the St. Paul workhouse. Judge Hunt forwarded a statement of the case to the war department. That was the last that was ever heard of him. But in the meantime his name was sent to Washington as a slacker from La Crosse. Later John Doe was listed as a deserter and could not be located. He was one of the few in the La Crosse district who were listed as simon-pure deserters. According to Judge Hunt the only deserters from La Crosse were transients; none was born or made his permanent home here.

Last week John Doe wrote to the judge from Chicago, asking him if he were ever called for service under the draft. The judge has forwarded the letter with a statement of the case to the department at justice.

SCOUTS FINISH BIG TASK HERE PACKING BAGS

Old Clothing Collected by School Children and Scouts is Sent Abroad

To prove that the citizens of La Crosse are generous, it will only be necessary to know the experience of the local boy scouts in packing the bundles of old clothing collected for the Near East, into sacks, preparatory to shipment to the Near East Receiving Depot at Milwaukee. This old clothing was collected by the school children and the scouts.

Preparatory to the collection of the clothing, two Near East Relief workers thoroughly canvassed the schools, relating that the Near East was suffering from lack of clothing as well as food. The result was that 380 bags of clothing were collected and shipped.

The clothing was originally collected in bundles at the schools, the Lincoln school has the record for the largest amount collected among the public schools, and the Holy Trinity has the record among the parochial schools. The Holy Trinity has the record for the largest amount collected of all the schools.

Packed in Sacks

After the bundles were all collected, scouts removed the paper and packed the clothing into gunny sacks, which were sewed and tied. This work took a tremendous amount of time and hard work, but it was interesting, from the standpoint of the observer, for when new bundles were opened, the boys were often heard to say, "Gee! this is better clothing than I have."

The condition of the clothing given was exceptional. Underwear, sweaters and ladies' coats seemed to make up the contents of most of the bundles. One bundle contained clothing from baby-hood to the clothing of a young man perhaps seventeen or eighteen years of age. In one case a lady's fur coat, practically new, was included in the bundle. Old furs of all descriptions were to be found, but it was quite surprising to see the small amount of children's clothing. The appeal was mostly for children, but the clothing given was more for adult use.

Letters in Bundles

Many letters were found in the bundles, some requesting that the party receiving the bundle write telling all about Armenia, not knowing that the poor Armenian would not have enough funds to purchase the envelope and paper, and pay for the postage. The poor sufferer in the East has to conserve every cent to keep body and soul alive.

Food, candy, and even jars of fruit were found, but all these exceptional cases only went to prove that the citizens of La Crosse are generous at heart, that an appeal for help always receives a listening ear and a helping hand.

The Near East Relief, by its present program cares for 64,107 Armenians and other orphans, and feeds 50,000 more, and there are thousands for whom nothing is done. Food, shelter and clothing are the big items of expense and need, but lately, another big item has come to the front, and has become the main objective. That is to instill into these orphan boys and girls, hope, faith and ideals that will develop moral and spiritual leadership for the coming years.

Outlines Program

The Near East Relief aims to accomplish this vital objective through a well-planned program of study, work and play. Regular schools are conducted where boys are taught a trade, and especially, they are trained in the making of shoes. The shoes sent from this country are repaired and made serviceable by the boys and old men. This industrial training is saving a great expense, and will mean economic independence and leadership later on.

One of the great factors that will help the boys who are the men of tomorrow of that unfortunate country to be better men and perhaps change the whole tenor of the Near East, is the training in scout craft that the boys are now receiving from special trained scout leaders of America who are there under the auspices of the Boy Scouts of America. Taking over this big task, by the national headquarters of Boy Scouts of America, is the big outstanding "good turn" of 1923, and it is hoped that these boys will, through the training that scouting gives, be better able to live up to the christian faith of the Mohammedan country, and to maintain the high ideals that are their inheritance.

SPARTA CLUB IS TO STOCK RIVER WITH GAME FISH

Back Yard Bass is Idea at Sparta; La Crosse River and Perch Lake to be Stocked

SPARTA, Wis.—If the plans of the Sparta Rod and Gun club are carried to successful conclusion, citizens of Sparta are going to have, in a few years from now, some of the finest bass fishing within the state and that by going only a block or two from the business center of the city. Better than that, some of the more fortunate ones here will be able to go into their back yards and catch a few bass for breakfast.

Stock Lake

The Rod and Gun club this summer has commenced to stock Perch lake with bass. The La Crosse river flows through Sparta. It is a clear, cold stream fed mostly by springs beyond here. Within a few blocks of the center of the city a dam has been built across the river to create water power for the Wisconsin-Minnesota Light and Power company, which furnishes Sparta with electric light and power. The dam has backed up considerable water in the La Crosse river and created a lake about three-quarters of a mile long and a quarter of a mile wide, known among residents as Perch lake. Though of artificial making, it is a splendid little body of water. Farther up the river is ideal for fish and three miles from here, at Angelo, there is another dam, so that the fish are confined in the river and lake between the two dams, with no chance of leaving unless the dam in Sparta goes out.

Confined Stream

It is this lake and river between the dams, some of it right in the city limits, which is to be stocked. Fish have been promised by the state and it is proposed to plant them from year to year until there is good fishing to be had here.

"We will begin stocking the lake immediately," said E. R. Arnold, assistant postmaster and president of the Sparta Rod and Gun club. "It is not the first attempt along this line, but conditions were against us. We had the lake fairly well stocked a few years ago, but at about that time the old dam went out and all the bass went with it down the river. The new dam is not likely to go out and in a few years we ought to have some good fishing.

"Our club has been organized for ten years, but we have not always been as active as we might have been. However, the 65 members have taken new interest and we are beginning to accomplish results. This spring we planted quite a lot of trout in the various streams of the county. We have some fine trout streams and have brook, rainbow and brown trout in them, but are planting more of those varieties. I know of only one other place that is as fortunately situated and we are not going to fail to take advantage of our waters."

ORDINARY SOAP WON'T CLEAN HAIR

It takes more than merely soap to thoroughly cleanse the hair and scalp. Soap, either liquid or solid, simply adds to the gummy coating of dandruff and foreign substances that literally stifle the growth of beautiful hair. They cannot and will not remove dandruff and greasy substances because water and grease will not mix.

The tonic in the Fitch Dandruff Remover Shampoo actually dissolves every particle of grease, dirt, dandruff and foreign substance and leaves every pore and hair follicle in the scalp open. The Shampoo holds this foreign substance in suspension which is then quickly and easily removed by the addition of water and friction, leaving a perfectly clean and antiseptic scalp with every pore and hair follicle functioning as nature intended. Your hair will then be beautiful, fluffy and appear much heavier. Your first Fitch Shampoo will leave no doubt, you will know "by the feel" that your hair and scalp were never thoroughly cleaned before.

Enough Fitch Dandruff Remover Shampoo to last for months costs but little at any toilet counter.

GERMANY MOURNS HARDING'S DEATH DECLARES HARDEN

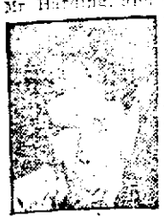

Realize that Friendly, Gentle Spirit Has Left the World

SORROW IS BLUNTED BY OWN MISFORTUNES

Describes Suffering of Poorer Classes

BY MAXIMILIAN HARDEN
Germany's Foremost Publicist
(Special Wireless Dispatch to the Tribune)
Copyright, 1923.

BERLIN—Sincere sorrow is felt in Germany today over the death of Mr Harding, and while the emotions of the German people are blunted by misfortunes of their own, they nevertheless feel a keen sympathy and realize a friendly, gentle spirit has left the world. Trials and tribulations come with such startling rapidity in this unhappy country that the sorrow of today gives way quickly to the misfortune of the morrow. And now, among Germany's dire [illegible] walks with

Maximilian Harden

Women of the middle class and [illegible] country's most pitiful creatures, once more run about for hours daily with empty baskets and stand for more hours before provision shops in order to buy the barest necessities of life for their husbands and their children. Despite the fact that they are told, dozens of times, that everything has been sold out, they remain, waiting and hoping. Finally, if they do secure pitiful little portions of food, they hurry to their homes, washing, mending and sewing until late into the night, worrying whether they will be able to buy anything on the morrow.

No Margin for Pleasure

These families have no amusements. The little girls can have no dolls; the boys are denied the harmlessest playthings because they would cost hundreds and thousands of marks. Meat, milk, eggs and fats, even margarine, together with fresh vegetables and fruits, are not merely unattainably expensive, but frequently cannot be obtained at all. The average German workman must toil 95 minutes in order to earn enough to buy a loaf of bread—bread of much poorer quality than the average English workingman gets for the money equivalent to only fifteen minutes' labor. This fact illuminates the question of commercial competition better than long tables of statistics.

Potatoes, the chief food of the masses, cost 180,000 marks a pound and often cannot be had for months at a time. A wise government assigned great quantities of potatoes to the distilleries, with the result that more drunken people are seen than ever before. The same was done with maize, barley and sugar. Only the distilleries, the manufacturers of liquor and chocolate and the luxurious restaurants have as much as they want.

Harvest Delayed

The most dangerous period for a blockaded or impoverished land is the time when the old harvest approaches exhaustion and the new one is unreaped. Cold weather, rain and hail have delayed for nearly a month the new harvest. Since grass is good, farmers are putting their cattle out to pasture instead of selling them for paper marks which may become valueless overnight.

Great quantities of the best food go to the luxurious summer resorts. The government is senselessly blind to its policy of foreign exchange which has, for weeks, partially if not entirely prevented the importation of foodstuffs. The government might have imported cheaply from neighboring countries, and thus shown German dealers how impossible it would be for them to dictate prices at will, but no attempt was made to do this. But the favored persons have been able to import bales of Persian carpets.

Taxes for 4 Per Cent of Costs

The inconceivably foolish hope that the value of the mark could be increased by holding the dollar quotation much lower than in New York, and by printing eight hundred to a thousand billion marks daily has ended as it had to end. The dollar, which stood for 66,000 marks in early July, now stands for 1,100,000 marks. And only 3 to 4 percent of Germany's expenditures are covered by taxes. The rest must be met by printing presses which produced 11,581,000,000 marks in the period between July 9 and 21. It is improbable that this abyss can be cleared by the new taxes just announced.

Even a foreigner must admit the patience and discipline with which the much abused population of Germany endure their hardships. The revolution which was feared for the last Sunday in July was feared without ground. It is a fact that the communists have gained ground because the Socialists, despite their 180 members in the reichstag, accomplish nothing but are split into sects and, without big funds and weapons, would not be able to stir the undernourished, skeptical and apathetic workman to revolt overnight.

An American would be filled with amazement if he heard that millions here are counting on an Anglo-French war striking off their chains soon, yet this is true. The new president of the United States assumes his lofty office with a world half mad.

DYNAMITE COMES HOME FROM CAMP TRIUMPHAL MARCH

Arrival of Mascot Marks Formal Closing of Boy Scout Camp at Council Bay

Conclusive proof that Camp Young Bear is closed for the season of 1923 was given when Dynamite, the camp mascot, a burro, arrived in the city Monday evening. Dynamite left camp ridden by Paul Bonnie of troop 8, at nine o'clock in the morning and arrived in La Crosse by the short route, at 10:30 that night. Dynamite was not tired when he arrived. He refused to enter the city and at the city limits, threw his rider and started back for camp.

With the assistance of another scout, he was persuaded to go to his winter home, and while on the way stopped many times to be admired by a group of boys and a surprising number of men and women. Dynamite's name and reputation has spread throughout the city, for at every hand, when the burro was sighted, people would say "there comes Dynamite." The Barnum and Bailey parade could not have drawn a bigger crowd at some points.

The donkey and rider stopped at the Bodega club, the scout to get his dinner and the donkey to be admired by scores, but the interesting feature of the evening was the offer of a silver dollar by Bill Bonadurer, manager of the Bodega club, for permission to ride the donkey around the block. Dynamite refused, and this was one case where the donkey would only stand on two feet and some of the time on none, with the result that the next time the would be rider seeks a pleasure ride, it will be taken in the soft sands of a river bank.

Camp Young Bear, on Friday morning, August 3rd, was closed to all scouts and visitors. No one is to drive through the farm yard, or camp site, without first stopping at the farmhouse, giving reasons, and getting cards before entering the ground. Little Bear Camp, down the ravine to the stream in Cold Water Canyon is open to the public. Much marking of trees, pulling of shrubbery, throwing of tin cans and leaving of waste paper is expected, but anyone so doing will receive a letter from the chairman of the camping committee, which will be very definite in its instructions.

PERSHING TO COMMAND HARDING FUNERAL ESCORT

C.—By order of General Pershing, who will personally command the funeral escort, the general staff is preparing orders that will assemble several thousand troops to do last honors to the dead commander-in-chief. A brigade of regular infantry and artillery, engineer and marine units as well as detachments of blue jackets will take part in the funeral parade.

ROAD BULLETIN FOR MOTORISTS

Weekly road report issued by the Automobile Club of Western Wisconsin.

No. 21—going east is in very good condition to West Salem, Bangor, Sparta and New Lisbon. And is the best all weather road to Madison. A detour west of Sparta which is in fair condition for slow travel, and a detour between New Lisbon and Mauston which is very poor, the best route keep on 21 and 13 to Kilbourn. This is a very good road some further. To go to Mauston and avoid the detour take 33 to Union Center and 94 and 71 to Mauston, a good road.

No. 11—Going to Galesville, Ettrick, Whitehall, Osseo, Foster to Eau Claire and north is in good condition. Graveling being done between Whitehall and Blair but road in good passable condition.

No. 11—going south through Mormon coulee is good. This is the shortest road to Madison, via Viroqua, Reedstown and Richland Center. Some work being done but detour good.

No. 27—Viroqua and Prairie du Chien, a very good dirt road but very heavy in wet weather.

No. 11, 27 and 30 to Dubuque is a good dry weather road, very heavy in wet weather.

No. 27—Viroqua to Cashton is under construction and detour is not very good.

No. 83—going to St. Joseph, Cashton, Ontario, Hillsboro, Wonewoc to Baraboo is a very good dry weather road, very heavy in wet going. This is the most scenic road to the east.

River road to Stoddard and De Soto is in good condition. This is a scenic road and is a part of the Mississippi Road and would make a nice Sunday drive to connect with No. 101 and 27, 11 back to La Crosse.

Minnesota roads are in very good condition, just now mostly gravel. Road to Hokah, Caledonia is fast improving as gravel is getting packed down. This road is known as Como Highway and is becoming a very popular drive. Lake Como at Hokah has a number of very fine summer homes.

No. 3—Minnesota is the best and shortest route to the Twin Cities. Mostly gravel the road between Dakota and La Moile is rather narrow in places but these places are well marked so there would be no danger by minding the signs and driving in a sane and careful manner.

La Crosse has the only free bridge between here and the Twin Cities.

The House by the Side of the Road continues to give information to about one hundred tourists a day, and also information and maps to members daily. The new emblems and books of Wisconsin laws and directory are now here and members are requested to call for them at the Secretary's office, these books contain much valuable information pertaining to auto drivers and give all data which is of interest. We also have booklets giving all streams and the kind of fish in the state of Wisconsin.

The county board has appointed about seventy-eight men with power of arrest to curb fast and reckless driving in the country, so you want to be careful and not exceed the speed limit of thirty miles an hour. You are being watched.

Any who can offer any suggestions for the safety of motoring, we would like to hear from them.

SEYMOUR L. MEISTER,
Secretary Auto Club.

OGEMA, Wis.—August Schilling, a resident of Ogema, was killed when his car overturned, breaking his neck. Marks on the road showed that the car had zig zagged several times before overturning. He was alone at the time.

PRESIDENT'S "CAL" TO HIS FRIENDS ON NEWSPAPERS

Holds up Special Train to Washington for a Reporter Friend

BY MALCOLM ELLIS
(Special Dispatch to the Tribune)
Copyright, 1923.

WASHINGTON—"Cal" and "Mike" met up all right and are in Washington now.

One thing which belies the proverbial austerity and solemnity surrounding President Calvin Coolidge is the fact that to some persons he is known as "Cal." M. E. Hennessy, dean of the corps of newspapermen in Boston for longer almost than the memory of man, is one of these. Mr. Hennessy's first name is Michael, but everyone who knowns him calls him "Mike." When the new president started for Washington he received a telegram from Hennessy. The telegram said that Hennessy was on his way to join the party, and, as is the custom, and privilege of friends, he practically asked "Cal" to wait for him at North Bennington, Vermont.

Mike Missing

But when the presidential special pulled into North Bennington, "Mike" could not be found President Coolidge despatched secret service men to search for him and delayed the train until it was determined that Hennessy was nowhere in the vicinity. Then reluctantly, he gave orders to proceed. A little later, at Rutland, Vermont, Hennessy put in his appearance.

"Well, 'Cal,'" he is reported to have said, "I missed you at North Bennington and came on here."

"Come in, Mike," said the president, "I want to tell you what I've told the other fellows so you'll know what's happened up to now."

INTEGRITY Studebaker SERVICE

Big-Six 5-Passenger Coupe $2550 1924 Model

1924 Models Are the Finest Big-Sixes Studebaker Ever Built

The enthusiasm with which the new 1924 model Studebaker cars have been received locally is an indication of the reception they have enjoyed throughout the country.

No wonder. They are emphatically the most compelling values Studebaker ever offered and the public knows that Studebaker has been a consistent leader, year after year, in the amount of intrinsic value per dollar invested.

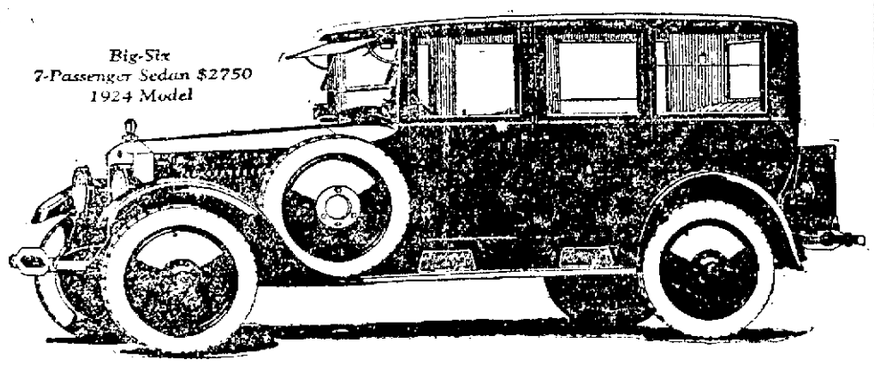

The Big-Six Sedan and the Coupe are the finest cars that have ever borne the name Studebaker. They provide all the performance, all the comfort, and all the dependability that any car will give—at a price that smaller producers cannot approach.

Everything for which one can wish in motoring convenience, comfort and utility has been provided—even to the extra disc wheel with tire, tube and tire cover (two on Sedan); handsome nickel-plated bumpers, front and rear; large, roomy trunk; automatic gasoline signal, and many other features. There is nothing more to buy.

The prices of the Sedan and Coupe are moderate because of Studebaker's large production, vast physical and financial resources; the manufacture of all vital parts in Studebaker plants, and the accumulation of experience and prestige gained through 71 years of building quality vehicles.

GOBS' DUCKING BASKET—MARK TWAIN'S HOME BURNS—SNOW BATHING BEAUTIES—THE AIR BIKE

LOOK WHAT CENTRIFUGAL FORCE DID!—You can call it that if you want to, but it looks like careless driving when a fellow turns a corner so fast that his car jumps the curve and knocks down a lamp post. The driver of this one was lucky enough to escape uninjured. It happened in New York.

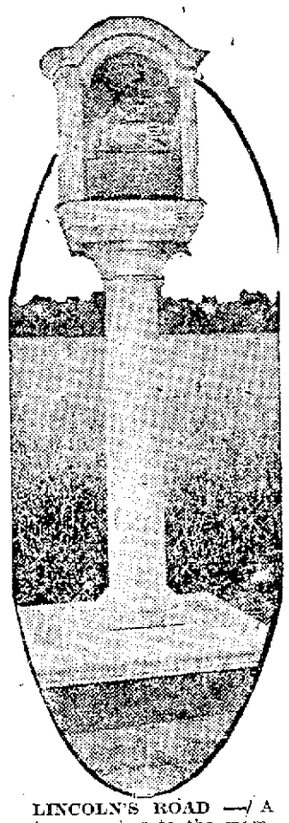

PUZZLES DON'T PUZZLE HER—Helen Martin, of Philadelphia, is never balked by a puzzle. By solving puzzles she has won a piano, an auto, $1250 in cash and a job. She has also won furniture which she gave to an aunt in Boston.

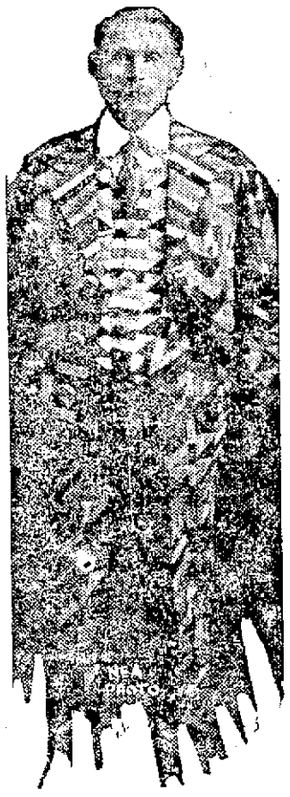

CHAPLAIN AND CHANCELLOR — The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Ignatius Seipel still acts in his former capacity of army chaplain although as chancellor of Austria he carries the burdens of state of that nation. Here he is holding church services.

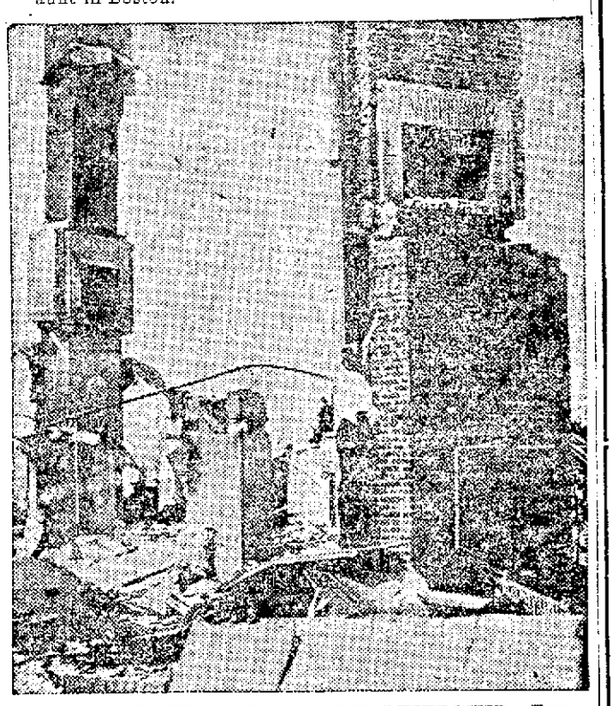

MAKING IT UP—Adaline Rhea, young Texas girl who has been called the "Bernhardt of the Dance," improvising steps at "Idle House," the Vanderbilt estate at Oakdale, Long Island. She studied painting, then switched to dancing. Her foot is so small that she can wear a child's shoe, size 12 1-2.

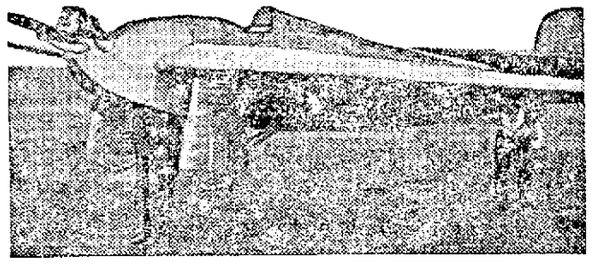

LINCOLN'S ROAD — A unique marker to the memory of Abraham Lincoln has been dedicated at Carlock, Ill. As a young lawyer, Lincoln passed along the road on which the above memorial stands. It is a column of concrete surmounted by a portrait of the emancipator in bas relief on bronze.

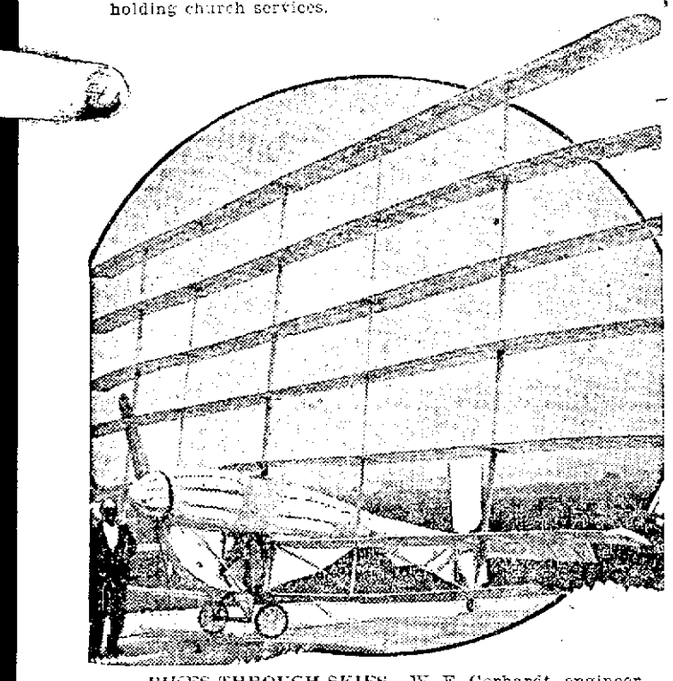

WANT ONE?—High price of clothing doesn't worry A. T. Vanderventer, New Matamoras, O. His wife made him this suit—of 2573 odd colors and sizes of goods. "It's my rainbow suit," he says. This is the second of its kind he has had. The last one he sold for $100.

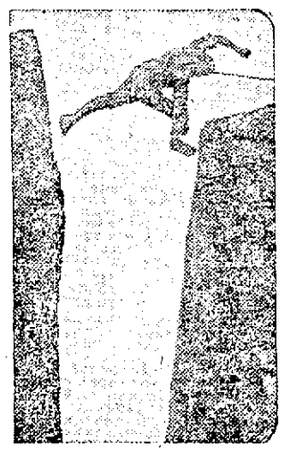

MARK TWAIN LANDMARK DESTROYED—Two flame-scarred chimneys are all that remain of Stormfield, the home of Mark Twain in the closing years of his life. It stood on a ridge at Redding, Conn.

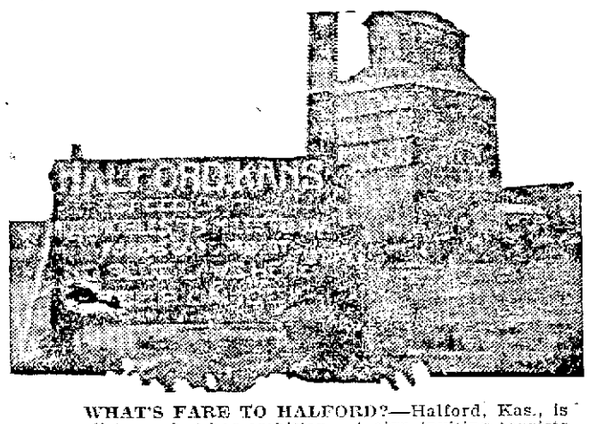

WORLD'S SMALLEST PLANE — This monoplane, built in Italy by former army aviators, is the smallest and lightest to be driven by a motor. It weighs 210 pounds and can be lifted by one man, although two are under it here.

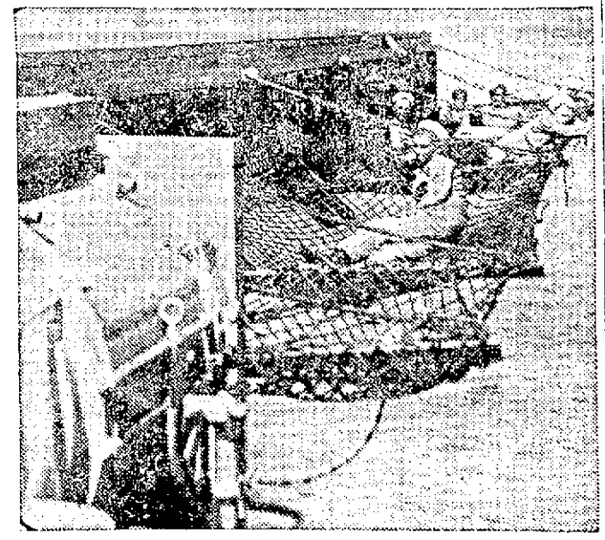

BIKES THROUGH SKIES—W. F. Gerhardt, engineer at McCook Field, Dayton, O., is shown here with what he calls his scientific curiosity. It is a "cycleplane," which he invented and in which he has made test flights. Motive power is supplied by the pilot's leg muscles. It works just like a bicycle except that it goes up.

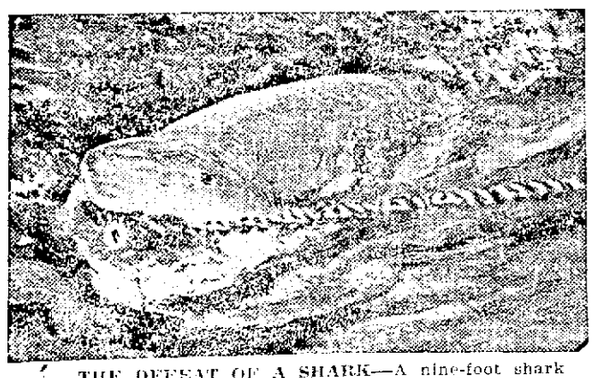

GOOD OLD ROPE!—One of the big feats in scaling the Alps is to leap across a cleft in Gallo peak. A rope around the waist is more to be desired than a life insurance policy.

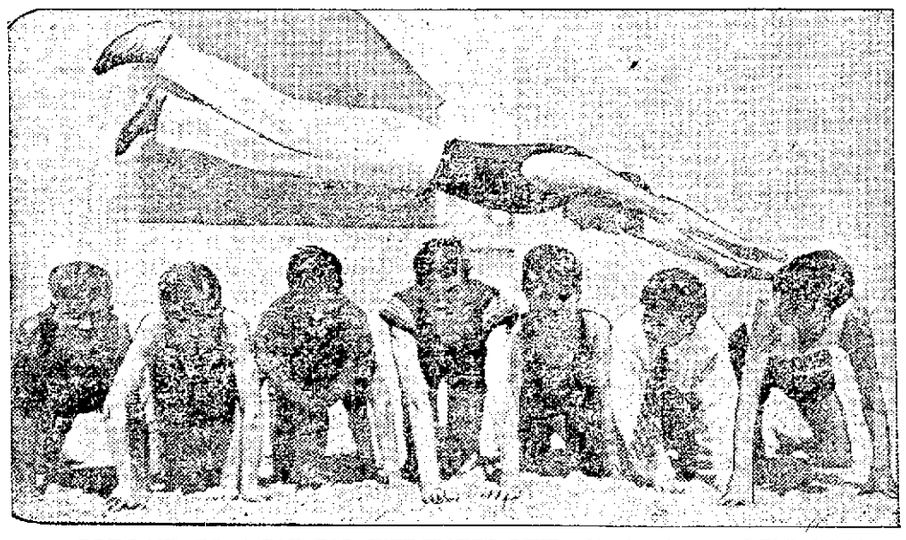

WHAT'S FARE TO HALFORD?—Halford, Kas., is a small town, but has ambition. A sign inviting tourists to speed 75 miles an hour may be seen at city limits. Fords are urged to do their best. And plenty of near-beer's on ice.

NURSE WELL TRAINED — "Sally," a Brazilian monkey, practiced being nursemaid to a valuable Angora cat, and did so well that now she has a life job taking care of Lillian, year-old daughter of Mrs. William Silva of Los Angeles. She likes it, too.

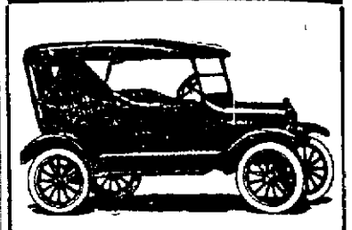

THE DEFEAT OF A SHARK—A nine-foot shark weighing 600 pounds brought in after half an hour's fight against the hook, manila rope and heavy chain that snagged him off Hyannis, Mass. Sharks have been unusually frequent in north Atlantic waters the past several weeks.

DRY-LAND PRACTICE FOR WET-WATER DIVE—Charles Green, of Philadelphia, took this remarkable flying dive over seven boys on the beach at Atlantic City for practice in high diving.

A SAFETY BALCONY—When planes land or take off from the U. S. S. Langley, navy plane carrier, the gobs leap for safety into a rope balcony that hangs over the side of the deck. Nothing but the rope is between them and the water.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR.

$298.00
F. O. B. DETROIT

There is a wonderful amount of real convenience and pleasure in the ownership of a Ford Touring car.

In the summer it affords a handy way for getting around on social calls, to parties or out for a cool drive in the early evening.

It is so economical to operate and so easy to drive that it will afford you much enjoyment that you have not had before—picnic parties, trips into the country or camping tours.

The graceful lines of the new one-man top and the slanting windshield make it better looking than ever before. Conveniently adjusted storm curtains afford protection against sudden showers. And it is always ready to take you anywhere you want to go.

A Profitable Investment

Steadily, month by month, for more than a year and a half, the demand for Ford cars has established new records. Even the enormous factory production of well over 6,500 cars a day has not begun to keep pace with the clamor for deliveries.

The acknowledgment of Ford value is universal. The recognition of Ford merit is world wide. The certainty that the Ford will serve well and long, always with the fullest satisfaction is accepted by everyone.

Today, the low prices on all Ford types, the proved low operating costs, the continued high value after long, hard service, make the purchase of this car a most profitable investment.

TARDIEU DECLARES GERMANY A RIDDLE MUCH LIKE RUSSIA

Bitter in Denunciation of German Republic as Corrupt and Dishonest

BY ANDRE TARDIEU
Former French High Commissioner to the U. S.
(Special Cable Dispatch to the Tribune)
Copyright, 1923.

PARIS—To a world surfeited with amazing and conflicting emotions comes, as a fresh shock, the news of the death of President Harding. France extends a silent sympathy to the people of America in their hour of sorrow for their passing chief. Another milestone in the gloomy progress of the times has been passed.

Meantime the European situation grows more complex. It will not be long before Germany becomes as incomprehensible to her contemporaries as Soviet Russia. Already she has earned the paradoxical distinction of being a country without money. Who can say whether she still has national spirit? Someone will reply that the Ruhr occupation has given her a new national spirit in the form of hate. But that reply is too easy and is not correct. Hate is no new thing to Germany. It was not born in the disappointment of defeat. Germany did not hate us less after beating us in 1871. Bismarck was merely the spokesman of the school of philosophy which from the beginning of the nineteenth century has taught the Germans to hate their neighbors.

Calls Hate Natural

The excuse was that Germany had suffered much in the course of centuries. But by whose fault? Germany hates us because we beat her. She would hate us if she had beaten us. It is her normal state of mind and does not explain her present psychology.

Nor can the French say the new democratic tendency is the dominant characteristic today. The provincial German has not changed. He is passive and docile as always. As always he obeys governmental functionaries. The workers would be less tractable but they are not masters of the situation. The Weimar republic has already utilized the Socialists' services, and its foreign policy under their direction has not been different from that of Cuno, the great businessman.

No Two Germanies

But the fallacy of "Two Germanies" has been exploded. That song was sung to us before the war when in May, 1914, our advanced parties went to Berne to fraternize with the self-styled representatives of one of those two Germanies. But in the following August the reichstag was unanimous in favor of aggressive war and all Germany followed the reichstag. After our victory at the Marne, to be sure a few protests were heard, but not before.

Conquered Germany seems to have adopted the cult of fraud with as much enthusiasm as conquering Germany adopted that of force. The writer speaks not only of the reparations fraud of which France has the right to complain. All Germany practices fraud against herself and against Germans as well as foreigners. Thanks to the clever depreciation of the mark no loan is repaid at its just value. Internal debts have gone up in smoke. The tax payment is nothing but speculation in exchange. Waste has become a state institution and the governing law of private individuals. Statistics, whether imports or exports, are doctored. For this gigantic lie serves as a screen to hide the nation's production from foreign eyes and that production with unimpaired equipment goes on with a steady rhythm.

Order a Memory

The wonderful example of administrative order afforded by Hohenzollern Germany is nothing but a memory today. In no nation are the public servants so corrupt and nowhere will men so readily betray their neighbors for money. It is as if a moral spring were broken. There is a national technique but no national ethics. And that is what will make all negotiation difficult with that misled people. Agreements will be made, signatures will be obtained, but when the time comes for execution, nobody will be there.

That is what has happened in recent years and that is what the writer fears will happen in the years to come.

DENY RETURN OF GOPHER WANTED IN WISCONSIN

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Governor J. A. O. Preus Saturday denied a requisition for the return to Wisconsin of Dr. Herbert A. Munns, a Minneapolis dentist, who was charged with stealing a set of false teeth from W. A. Chapman of New Richmond. The governor deemed the matter inconsequential.

LUMBERMAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

DODGEVILLE, Wis. — Thomas Metcalf, president of the Metcalf & Sons Lumber company, was killed and Thomas Mitchell, Dodgeville, is near death at St. Joseph's hospital, as a result of an automobile accident late Friday night a mile west of Ridgeway.

"BROKEN CHAINS"

Miss Winifred Kimball, of Apalachicola, Fla., was the winner of the first prize in the Chicago Daily News scenario contest. Her script, called "Broken Chains," which will be seen at the Rivoli Theatre for three days beginning Monday, won over 32,000 others submitted.

Miss Kimball wrote the imaginary tale for the screen as a last desperate hope. Her father, formerly a contractor in Chicago, had lost his fortune not so long ago, and unable to endure the ruin of his life work, had sent a bullet through his brain. A few weeks later, Miss Kimball's brother-in-law, Dr. Alexander, a distinguished physician, destroyed himself. Thus, in a short space Miss Kimball and Mrs. Alexander were left alone in their cottage in Apalachicola. The taxes were unpaid. Repairs were long overdue. Bills were accumulating.

When Miss Kimball read of the scenario contest she thought there might be some chance of winning one of the smaller prizes, and then the check for $10,000 came.

"YOU NEVER KNOW"

Earle Williams has one of the best pictures of his career in "You Never Know," which will be shown at the Majestic Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday.

There, is the atmosphere of the Latin countries, full of rhythm, melody, fire and passion. Then there is the transition to the life in the North, where man is slow to anger and conservative in his actions. This contrast brings out all of the beauty and romance of the western hemisphere.

"THE ALTAR STAIRS"

For "The Altar Stairs" the attraction beginning a two-day run at the Majestic theatre today a leading woman was sought for the role opposite Frank Mayo who would be three things; an actress of unquestionable ability, a remarkably pretty girl and a type absolutely suited for the role. The girl had to look very "Frenchy" and decidedly petite.

Louise Lorraine was selected. For the feminine "heavy" Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of Leopold Godowsky, the famous pianist-composer, was chosen.

"SHERLOCK HOLMES"

John Barrymore is to be seen at the Rivoli Theatre Thursday for three days, as fiction's greatest detective—Sherlock Holmes.

"Sherlock Holmes" was directed by Al Parker. Perhaps no other character in fiction is so universally liked and known, and from all indications, the same universal interest is attaching itself to the picturization of the famous detective story.

"SHREIK OF ARABY"

"My candid opinion of "The Shriek of Araby'," said Allen McNeil, the Sennett film editor, "is that it is without doubt one of the best and most interesting attractions I have had to do with.

"In the first place the story, though it is burlesque, is extremely funny and affords much opportunity for a variety of action. The atmosphere throughout naturally lends itself to the romance called for in the plot, while the interior and exterior sets are not only beautiful but convincing."

"The Shriek of Araby" has been booked as the comedy feature at the Rivoli theatre for today.

NORMA TALMADGE AT CASINO THEATRE TODAY

"O East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet," wrote Kipling in one of his inspired moods. But in "The Forbidden City," at the Casino Theatre, East, most intriguingly interpreted by Norma Talmadge, marries the West as represented by Thomas Meighan. It is a tale of China of the mandarins, a tale of mystery and romance and pathos intermingled.

All those who saw "The Forbidden City" when it was first issued will want to see it again. And this is the opportunity for those who missed it when it first appeared. Norma Talmadge never appeared in a more absorbing drama.

STRAND—TODAY

Maxwell Karger, whose Metro production, "The Man Who", starring Mr. Bert Lytell, is now at the Strand Theatre, is a forceful director in his language — especially when he desires to impress something particular upon those acting before the camera.

In this story there are a number of scenes dealing with soldiers, and for this part a number of veterans of the First Division were engaged. After listening to the Metro director as he ordered the veterans about the setting in the Metro studios, the soldiers decided: "That bird must have been a sergeant. He's a regular army guy."

"DEUCE OF SPADES"

Charles Ray is supported by a splendid cast in "The Deuce of Spades". It plays the Majestic next Thursday.

The part of the girl, a western type, is taken by Marjorie Maurice, who, as Marjorie Prevost, played with Ray in "The Old Swimmin' Hole."

NEW MANAGEMENT RE-OPENS RIVIERA SATURDAY, AUG. 11

The Riviera theater, on the north side, will re-open on Saturday, August 11, under the management of the La Crosse Theaters company.

Considerable time and effort have been spent during the summer months in installing a new screen, putting in new projectors, repairing the pipe organ and thoroughly renovating the theater.

The Riviera patrons can be assured of good music, with all of the programs being arranged and played by Walter Goetzinger, the Blind Organist, who has made a name for himself as an organist at the Rivoli theater.

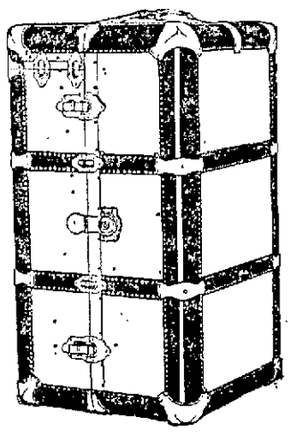

There will be four changes of programs each week. Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, with matinees on Sunday only and evening shows every day of the week. Nothing but the best of screen productions will be offered, it is announced and the management will use every effort to make the patrons comfortable during their visits to the theater.

OLD EXTRA TELLS OF ASSASSINATION OF PRES. LINCOLN

Mrs. Houghtaling Exhibits Family Relic of Year When Harding Was Born

Publication of the Tribune extra edition at midnight Thursday announcing the death of President Warren G. Harding reminded Mrs. Lucy Houghtaling, 1008 South Fifth street, that she had in her possession another extra announcing the sudden death of a president of the United States in 1865, the year in which President Harding was born.

This extra edition is a copy of the New York Herald issued the morning of Saturday, April 15, 1865, announcing the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln the night before in Ford's theater, Washington, D. C., by J. Wilkes Booth. This newspaper is in a splendid state of preservation. It was the property of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Hall, Warrens, Wis., parents of Mrs. Houghtaling, until their death and then came into her possession. The paper has always been kept in the family bible.

The entire first page of this edition of the Herald was devoted to the story of the assassination of President Lincoln and the search for the assassin. The column rules of the paper were turned upside down and bold face type added the finishing touch to the mourning edition's first page, which was striking and impressive.

Complete with operating theater, kitchen and saloons, a derelict hospital train in Mesopotamia now serves a native sheik as a Turkish bath.

Cubs Retain Hold on Fourth Place Split With Robins

CINCINNATI, Ohio.—The Giants increased their lead over the Reds to four games by winning, 14 to 4, the first of a five game series before more than 20,000 fans Saturday. Luque, who had beaten the New York club three times this season, shutting them out twice, was pounded fiercely and was knocked out of the box in the fifth, when the visitors scored five runs on five hits and a pass. Harris was also ineffective. Meusel and Jackson each got four hits out of five times up. Score:

	R	H	E
New York . .	000 250 430—14	20	0
Cincinnati . .	100 000 021— 4	11	1

Ryan and Snyder, Gaston; Luque, Harris, McQuaid and Hargrave, Sandberg.

Pirates, 2-4; Phils, 4-3

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — Pittsburgh and Philadelphia divided a double header, the Phillies winning the first game, 4 to 2 and the Pirates the second, 4 to 3.

In the first game Philadelphia bunched three hits in the fifth for as many runs. Williams' home run in that inning which scored one run ahead of him was the first to go over the right field fence this season.

A drizzling rain fell in the second game. Schmidt's hand was split in the eighth and he retired. Scores:

First game—	R	H	E
Philadelphia .	000 030 100—4	9	0
Pittsburgh . .	000 000 002—2	11	1

CHICAGO, Ill.—Chicago retained its hold on fourth place Saturday by dividing honors in a double-header with Brooklyn. The visitors won the first, 7 to 3, behind great pitching by Vance, who registered his eighth consecutive victory. The locals shut the Dodgers out in the second game, 3 to 0. Scores:

Braves, 7-4; Cards, 6-2

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Boston took both games from the Cardinals here Saturday, 4 to 2 and 7 to 6. A home run by Southworth in the eleventh decided the second game in favor of Boston.

The first contest was decided in the opening inning when the visitors scored all their runs on six straight singles and a wild pitch, before a man was retired.

Kopshaw, a young catcher, obtained recently from the Appalachian league, made his first appearance in the second game. Scores:

WESTBROOK IN FLASHY NET GAME DEFEATS HAYES

Westbrook won the right to face George Lott, Jr., 17, Chicago city champion, who Friday eliminated John Hennessy, Indianapolis, and last year's singles winner, Sunday.

CINCINNATI, O. — Tom Hart, catcher of the St. Xavier college team, this city, signed Saturday to play with the New York Giants next season.

In The Sport Mirror

HOW does a batting average of .776 strike you? Off-hand, we'd say that's an unusual record and we seldom see the men who do it. But there is in La Crosse a man who accomplished the feat while a member of the university of Wisconsin team in 1903. He is Archie Persons, sales manager at the J. J. Hogan wholesale grocery house. Persons has been in the city for over a year now but Archie is too busy to pay much attention to baseball, other than watching an occasional game. Dr. McGovern, close follower of sports, put us next to Archie, he having recognized him some time ago as the world beater on the Eau Claire nine when Doc was playing with Menominee some years back.

PERSONS, a graduate of the university of Wisconsin, won letters on the varsity team in 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, being a member of the 1902 and 1905 championship teams at Madison. His hitting, attested by the .776 average credited to him in an official certificate received from the university, was Archie's long suit. He was an outfielder of the first caliber and in his organied baseball career following graduation, earned the name of the "wingfoot of the south" while playing in a southern league. In addition to baseball, Persons was a fast track man. In 1903 he won the gold medal as the best all-around gymnast in the western conference.

* * * *

FROM the university Archie went directly to the Iowa state league and then to the Minneapolis club. From there he moved to the southern league, playing two years each with Nashville and Montgomery. His career also carried him to the coast league, playing with Sacramento. He moved to the Texas league a year later and in 1912 played with the Vancouver club of the northwest league. Here Archie broke his ankle and retired from the game. He has seven letters from University of Wisconsin tucked away in his personal belongings, winning them in baseball and track. In the Outing magazine for August, 1905, Persons was credited with being one of the best outfielders in the western conference. Persons took little interest in football while at the university, baseball and track being his sports.

I overheard Coach Keogan and C. L. Hedges, superintendent of the street railway company, framing it up for a little tournament at "barnyard golf" which will undoubtedly take place some time this week. Mr. Hedges came in to tell us how the railway motormen got fleeced at the hands of an Onalaska Sextette, and incidentally got mixed up in a conversation with Keogan. "I'll bring a bunch over and give you fellows another beating," ventured Keogan, for a kid. "That's the boy," comes back Hedges, with much of the tone of the "man from Missouri." The street car bunch includes a hefty lot of pitchers, which is improving consistently since the installation of a court beside the car station. Incidentally, Mr. Hedges told us that he will make an attempt to bring the Spring Grove team here for a match with a picked bunch from the city. He indicated that at least a couple of men from Central fire station would be included in the local representation, with others from the "Y" and his own men.

IN selecting fellows like Harry Cohen and Al Schreiner as co-op sponsors of the new baseball club here, those at the root of the thing did a good job. Both Harry and Al are dyed-in-the-wool fans of all kinds of sport in season and the management has a couple of good boosters in these two men. Harry ought to be able to influence a big flock at West Salem to come in for the games and incidentally support the team, for being erstwhile "mayor" of the village should account for something. Then Al is well able to talk Turkey to the boys and should be able to tip off some good hunches in running a ball club. We're hoping the team comes through with a brand of ball that will command a full attendance the rest of the season.

OTTO J. Endres, formerly of La Crosse and last year track coach at Wisconsin high, Madison, has accepted a position as coach of the Tulsa, Oklahoma, high school for the coming year. Endres was formerly coach at Madison Central high school. Otto, it will be remembered, took active interest in the coaching of football while attending the La Crosse high school, where during his last year he was in charge of the second string eleven. Since his graduation here, Endres has gone steadily ahead in the coaching game and this year takes charge of one of the largest high schools in Oklahoma. He is a "W" man at the university.

NAPOLEON fought at Waterloo, Willard at New York, Gibbons at Shelby and now Blair at Copeland park on Sunday. The Blair aggregation and the Nelsons have divided a brace of games. So write your own ticket. Blair knows its stuff. It has engaged the services of Fitzke and Franzini, and is out to win.

* * * *

AL Meinert, former Montagne shortstop, will occupy the initial sack for the Nelsons. He should boost the batting average of the club. He is a popular fellow and a good clean baseball player.

THE gate receipts at some of the games make the maning a Dempsey-Gibbons fight. Quarters are so seldom seen in the outfield collection that the collectors grin their prettiest when they hear the sound. The game is a business proposition and without support from the outfield, baseball will not continue in La Crosse. It ought to be worth two bits to see the game from the garden.

WESTBY had planned to toot its own horn at the game Sunday, but the big picnic has been called off in respect of the death of President Harding. The band will no doubt be heard at Copeland park next week.

RICKARD FEARS SECOND-RATER MIGHT WAY-LAY FIRPO BEFORE MILLION GETS THROUGH GATES

BY SPARROW McGANN

Special correspondent of the Tribune. Copyright 1923 by the Tribune.

NEW YORK.—By the end of next week Jack Dempsey's dogs will begin to scuffle up the dust of New York roads, the punching bags in his training quarters will beat a merry tattoo and his sparring partners will resume their off hour divertissement of talking to themselves when the condition of the lower maxillary permits. All is in preparation for the fight September 14th with Luis Angel Firpo and a large bundle of dough.

Luis Getting in Shape

Meanwhile said Louis Angel Firpo is strutting valorously through the hushes of Fightdom nursed and coddled from afar, like the favorite chow of a childless millionairess, by Tex Rickard and the promoters whose money Tex spends. "Watch your step" broadcasts Tex. "Step up. Attaboy! Tuck the covers around him and turn out the light." And Rickard sighs as another day is done.

Just so long as Firpo is booked for matches against the third and fourth raters, Rickard will shiver for fear the draft from some vagrant wallop will blow down the house of cards he has built up to draw from the pockets of Fandom a million dollar gate. After the gong rings for the first round at the Polo Grounds September 14, few besides those so misguided as to bet on the pride of the Pampas will care what happens to him. After that his memory will probably be interred unidentified in the potter's field of pugilistic hopes. All Rickard cares is to have Firpo last until the money is through the Polo Ground turnstiles.

Meanwhile, however, he is in danger and will be until Luis disposes of Charlie Weinert at Philadelphia on August 13th. A rotten unlucky day is August 13th. Dempsey probably will devote some of his off-hours to cultivating the cops. "Three cheers for a policeman" is a queer sentiment for any fighter to subscribe to but it undoubtedly would receive enthusiastic endorsement at the Dempsey camp. After the array of artillery around the ring at Shelby, the two Jacks, Dempsey and Kearns, look with beaming eyes on the blue coated guardians of the peace who will keep order at the Polo Grounds.

Uses Up Sparring Partners

The usual plaint comes from the Dempsey headquarters about the difficulty in obtaining sparring partners. The reason, it is averred, is that the champion just can't modulate his methods or refrain from putting full steam into his punches, thereby using up sparring material at an unprecedented rate. It might be remembered however, that such inability to restrain the fierceness of his attack was in little evidence against Gibbons.

It is probable that the September 14th battle however, will end far before the allotted limit of fifteen rounds is reported. Firpo has been built up for this one big money killing by the promoters and there seems little to be gained by saving him up for another match. When he's licked he's through, so far as the big money is concerned and the champion will probably stow him away accordingly.

Length might be added to the battle by providing Firpo with a pair of spiked shoes and making a cinder track around the ring. In fault of this equipment, however, Firpo will probably rest his hitherto uncauliflowered ear upon the canvas for the necessary period soon after hostilities commence. He has the ability to take a profitable beating and if he falters his handlers will offer the necessary encouragement. It won't hurt him.

"Only $25," is the way the promoters refer to the maximum charge for seats. The prices scale down to $3 but the inhabitant of the $3 seats probably will be so far away from the scene of hostilities as the crown prince was from the front in France.

MONTAGUES ARE REORGANIZED SAYS GEORGE F. GONIA

Local Fan Claims Members of Old Club Have Again Been Banded Together

KRAUSE CLAIMS OTHER CLUB HAS MONTAGUE EQUIPMENT

New Club to Take Northern Trip, Says Gonia

A statement by George F. Gonia that he had reorganied the disbanded Montague club, including McCauley, and banded them together under the name of the La Crosse club, caused a flurry in baseball circles Saturday night.

Bill Krause, one of the sponsors of the "All-Stars," now La Crosse team, when informed of Gonia's activities Saturday night, stated that the La Crosse club of which he is a memebr has secured definite arrangement with the park board for alternate Sunday dates at Copeland park, and that all of the Montague paraphernalia, including uniforms and other equipment had been turned over to him. The money with which the Montague equipment was purchased was donated by south side business men, Krause said.

Have Game Here Aug 19

The game to be played by the former All-Stars, now the La Crosse club, is on August 19, when West Salem or Caledonia comes here. Krause indicated that their club was perfected in its organiation and were prepared to see the season through.

Rumors to the effect that the former Montague players were to be banded together again have been circulated about the streets and cigar stores durin gthe past week, but Gonia's announcement Saturday was the first actual news of the reorganiation.

Mr. Gonia claims that each member of the old Montague club has been secured and will enter the club which proposes to play under the name of the La Crosse club. "I have seen every member of the team," said Gonia, "and they all jumped at the opportunity to get back with the old club."

He expressed the intention of picking up most of the cancelled Montague dates out of the city, including the return game at Wausau and Prairie du Sac. He indicated that the Montagues were being held for $100 for a return engagement at Prairie du Sac and that the new club would relieve them of the obligation and accept the date.

Northern Trip Planned

Gonia stated that the club would be taken on a northern tour, saying that Rhinelander and several other northern towns want games with the club. He said that a city series would be played this fall with the La Crosse Nelsons, starting on September 2, according to an agreement with Henry Wittenberg. A seven game series would be played he said. Wittenberg could not be reached Saturday evening. His brother, Roy Wittenberg, said he had heard nothing of a city series arrangement with Gonia.

When asked about the arrangement Saturday, Art Mills, former first sacker of the Montagues, said he had not definitely promised to go into the new organiation. Other members of the club could not be reached Saturday night.

Mr. Gonia intimated that he had made no definite arrangement about Copeland Park.

DULUTH RETAINS BARNS TROPHY AT BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Md.—Although losing the senior eight-oar race to the Undine Barge club of Philadelphia, the Duluth Boat club scored enough points to retain the Barnes trophy, emblematic of the senior championship which the Minnesotans have held for ten years. Undine won by four-fifths of a second. West Philadelphia Boat club was third and New York Athletic Crew No. 2 was fourth.

MANNERS OF THE MEDIEVAL TIMES

In mediaeval times persons of the same family shared common plates and cups, used fingers instead of forks, licked their plates, wiped their teeth on the tablecloth and scrambled for the largest portion. Books on etiquette issued in the 15th century pointed out that these things were not good manners. The art of cooking in the Middle Ages flourished, however, cooks excelling at artistic and rich confectionery. Dancing in mediaeval times was true to its name. Dancers really moved with nimbleness and agility instead of slowly posturing round the room in the manner of modern dancers. The noble and his family and servants lived and slept in the great hall of the castle, with next to no privacy. A better state of things evolved gradually, more rooms being added and more windows put in, ensuring greater seclusion for the lord and his family.

FORD ATTENDS FUNERAL OF MAN WHO AIDED HIM

DETROIT, Mich.—Henry Ford today postponed his annual vacation for a day so that he might pay his last respects to the man who "helped to give him his start.

The funeral was that of Alexander Young Malcomson, who gave the Ford Motor company badly needed financial support in its infancy. Mr. Ford acted as an honorary pall-bearer.

Mr. Ford was to have left today on an automobile tour in company with Thomas Edison and other friends.

"CHICK" EVANS AND BOBBY MACDONALD TO APPEAR AT LOCAL GOLF LINKS SATURDAY

"CHICK" EVANS

LA CROSSE is to be the host of two celebrities in the world of sport next Saturday in the coming of "Chick" Evans, western amateur golf champion, and Bobby MacDonald, another noted golfer, for a match at the La Crosse Country club links.

The appearance of these two men in La Crosse was arranged for as a special feature of activities at the Country club, and easily the largest gallery on record is expected to follow the players.

"Chick" Evans a week ago Saturday won the western amateur golf championship at Cleveland, Ohio, defeating Hamilton Gardner in the finals, 6 and 4. The victory marked the eighth successive year in which Evans has won the amateur title.

It has been announced that Evans and MacDonald will be paired against the pick of the field at the local country club. George Van Auken, present champion at the links, will undoubtedly be chosen as one of the players.

Those interested in golf and in seeing the champion do his stuff are invited to attend the match. An admission charge to aid in defraying the expense of bringing the men here will be made.

The match is scheduled to start promptly at 1:30 Saturday afternoon.

THIRD BATTLE FOR SUPREMACY BETWEEN LA CROSSE NELSONS AND BLAIR STAGED ON SUNDAY

THE third battle for supremacy in the series between the La Crosse Nelsons and Blair will be waged at Copeland park this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Blair and the Nelsons have each won one game to date and today's encounter promises to yield everything in the way of a bitter fight for the "rubber" game.

La Crosse has been without the usual mid-week contest this week due to weather conditions not at all favorable to baseball and the game today should supply a fitting entertainment after the layoff.

Wednesday's cancellation of the Lansing tilt marked the fourth time this season the La Crosse Nelsons have been rained out, all of which means that the coffers are yawning.

Mixed up in the battle today will be a mingled array of men who formerly wore the white uniform of the Montague club. Fitzke and Franzini have donned the blue of Blair, while Al Meinert, former team mate, will occupy the sack at the end of the first chalked line for the Nelsons. Fitzke will certainly be looking for the high ones in the field, with Franzini in his usual position at the receiving end of the battery.

The Nelson lineup will remain intact with the exception of Woll, in whose berth Meinert will perform. Stromwell, who it was said, was convalescing the past week after having pulled a neat life-saving stunt involving two girls in Lake Calhoun at Minneapolis, was reported in good condition.

If the weather man's prediction of "fair" is true, there should be a goodly gathering at the park today.

HOLLOCHER TO STAY OUT OF GAME REST OF SEASON

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Charles Hollocher, shortstop and captain of the Chicago National league team, told an Associated Press correspondent here Saturday night that his decision to remain out of the game for the rest of the season was made upon advice of a physician who had been treating him for a stomach ailment. Hollocher arrived here with his family Saturday, but was undecided whether he would remain here.

OFFER REWARD TO SMASH RUMOR OF U. S. BASS NETTING

In order to set at rest rumors, strenuously declared to be false, that the rescue crews of the federal bureau of fisheries are seining between wing dams for bass, instead of devoting attention to saving fish in land-locked waters, the La Crosse Chapter of Izaak Walton league at a meeting Friday evening put up a reward of $25 for any person who could prove the rumor true.

The reward, said President Grover, will be paid to any person for proof that any of the rescue crews of the bureau of fisheries have seined for any fish in the open waters of the Mississippi river."

It was feared that the rumor might give a prejudiced idea to many people of the highly important work being done by the rescue crews, and perhaps lead to a slackening of public support of the work.

NOTED DRIVERS ENTER DIRT TRACK AUTOMOBILE RACES

CHICAGO, Ill.—Louis Chevrolet, Ralph De Palma, Leon Duray, the Frenchman, Howard Wilcox, Dario Resta and Joe Boyer have entered for the American dirt track championship automobile races at the Hawthorne race track here next Sunday. The entry of Chevrolet, whose brother, Gaston, was killed on the Los Angeles speedway four years ago and who since then has not competed in a race, was a surprise.

Barney Oldfield has donated a silver trophy emblematic of the 1923 dirt track championship.

STREET CAR EMPLOYES ARE GIVEN A RAISE

DETROIT, Mich.—The Detroit United Railways today announced an increase of six cents an hour in the wages of all platform employes. An agreement with the employes was signed last night. This brings wages on all interurban lines and on the city lines in Flint and Pontiac to 61, 64 and 66 cents an hour, depending on length of services. Employes on city lines in Ann Arbor and Mount Clemens receive a like increase, but their wages still are two cents an hour below those in the other cities. Operators of one-man cars are to receive five cents an hour more than other employes.

HELP FOR THE MAN WHO WANTS TO BUILD

ELIMINATING "EXTRAS" IN HOME BUILDING

This is the fifth of a number of articles to appear in this column on "Home Building Extras" and How to Eliminate Them by The Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, inc.

In this, and the final article to appear in this column on home building "extras," we want to point out to you something about the duties of the architect to the home builder, inasmuch as the architect plans the house and is the executive in charge during the operation.

The architect should make sure that the home builder understands every detail of the provisions of his plans and specifications. He should so illustrate and so explain the work that the home builder should have a definite, clear, mental picture of the house which the drawings call for. When the owner and architect fully understand each other, half the battle is won.

Complete Plans Mean Saving

Complete plans and details, and complete definite specifications actually cost less to produce in the end than slipshod documents which must constantly be supplemented and corrected. Nothing is more bothersome on a job, nothing causes more delays, changes and "extras" that incomplete drawings. Home builders are justified in feeling that the architect is the responsible person, and all directions, approvals or disapprovals of the work to the contractor should be in writing by the architect. Verbal orders or conversations are easily distorted and forgotten. The architect should allow no changes or substitutions unless the owner's approval is obtained in writing, or unless the owner is advised in writing.

The architect should see that all provisions of the contract are fairly carried out.

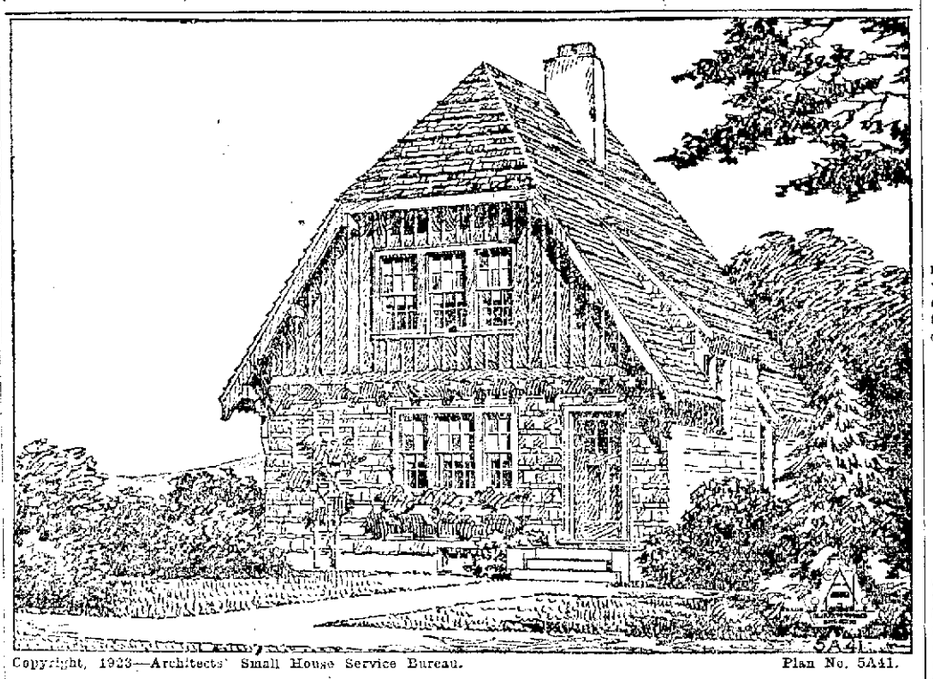

The contractor should carry out all provisions of the contract to the letter. If difficulties arise, he should advise the architect, preferably in writing, because he is employed by the owner to assist the architect. The contractor should insist that all directions come from the architect in writing, and should transact all business with the owner through the architect.

Handpick Subcontractors

Subcontractors should be handpicked. You can't expect to get good work from those who are incompetent and inexperienced. Substitutions should be avoided, unless some other material than that called for in the specifications is more than equivalent, or that specified is found to be not readily obtained.

If changes are suggested affecting the cost, the contractor should submit definite estimates in writing to the architect at once, before any work is done, in order that the owner, through the architect, may be definitely and immediately advised.

FIVE ROOM SWISS CHALET TYPE HOUSE

Copyright, 1923—Architects' Small House Service Bureau. Plan No. 5A41.

THIS five room house is 24 feet wide. In some localities it can be accommodated on a 34 foot lot.

For a narrow lot, the porch, which may be of the open or closed type, should be placed at the rear. For a wider lot, the porch may be at the side.

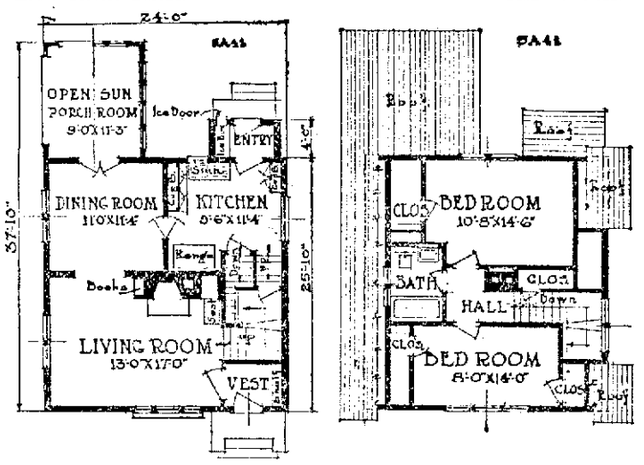

The plans call for frame construction, exterior finish of wide shingles and battens.

There is a cement base course, with cement steps to the doorway.

The large living room is made delightful by a fireplace, and by a large window directly opposite. A bay window in the kitchen serves as a breakfast nook.

On the second floor there are two good bedrooms. Each has a closet. There is also a bath.

The kitchen is scientifically planned to save steps and labor.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN SECOND FLOOR PLAN

This home is not only practical, but distinctive in type, and will hold its own in any neighborhood, both in style and in reasonable building costs, for what it provides in equipment, convenience and comfort.

The cost to build this house, including heating, plumbing, lighting, painting, ready to live in, but not including wall decorations, should range between $6,500 and $7,500. In certain localities where costs are high, the highest figure quoted would be too low. In other localities, the lowest figure quoted would be more than sufficient. The range of $1,000 is given to cover differences in the way the house is built, how thoroughly it is equipped and completed and in what district it is erected.

The plans for small homes are furnished by the regional Bureau of the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., controlled by the American Institute of Architects, indorsed by the department of commerce, United States government. The estimated costs of construction are based on general average for the entire country. The United States Bureau maintains an information department to answer home builders' questions. For information regarding the blue prints and specifications, which are supplied at moderate costs, address the Home Building Editor of this paper. Inclose self-addressed stamped envelope and the above plans and illustration.

WHAT YOU MAY WANT TO KNOW ABOUT BUILDING

Questions addressed to the paper will be answered by the Architect's Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., controlled by the American Institute of Architects and indorsed by the department of commerce, United States government. Inclose selfaddressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Q. I understand that there are different kinds of mahogany. What is the difference?

A. There are many varieties of mahogany just as there are different varieties of maple, oak and pine. The difference is not great. It lies in the grain figure and the depth of color.

Q—In looking over a house under construction, I saw rows of brick placed on wood beams in several places and was told this was a form of fire stop. Is this an effective method of stopping the spread of fires? Where should the bricks be placed?

A—This is an effective method of stopping the spread of flames between studs. Unless some form of blocking is used in these places they form flues for fires originating in the basement which may carry fire through the house with great rapidity. The ends of the beams and studs should be cut off by means of blocking. A more extensive method of fire stopping is followed by filling these places with metal lath baskets in which plaster debris, and other incombustible materials are placed. Bricks are sometimes used. If the studs are bridged or cross braced as they should be this will serve as an effective fire stop.

Q—Does the finish of the metal in a radiator have anything to do with the efficiency of the radiator?

A—Yes. Radiators finished with a high polish or glossy paint are not as efficient in radiation as those with a dull finish. This is due to the fact that the glossy surface seems to retain the heat instead of expelling it.

Q—Which is more expensive—low or high radiators? Is there any difference in the amount of heat given off by radiators of these types provided each has the same amount of radiating surface?

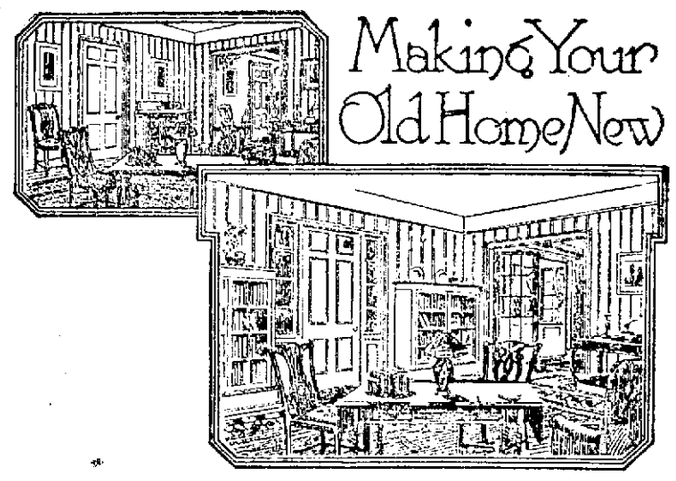

A—High radiators are less expensive than low radiators. This is true because high radiators require fewer sections than low ones for the same number of square feet of radiating surface. The high radiators are more effective per square foot of radiating surface than the low radiators. The air is circulated more readily in the former type and is more thoroughly heated as it passes.

THE satisfaction that comes when you make over something that doesn't suit you into something you really like is almost greater than the satisfaction of making something entirely new.

A new front entrance, with sidelight sash; French doors between the living room and dining room; a sunny bay window that makes both rooms more cheerful; a couple of built-in bookcases in those bare corners—these involve neither radical changes in your house nor great expense for labor and new woodwork, and yet they make the old house take on a new life.

CYLINDER GRINDING

When a motor has lost its power, lacks compression, pumps oil, fouls its plugs, develops a knock or piston slap and consumes oil and gasoline out of proportion to the service rendered, it's a sure sign the cylinder needs re-grinding and fitting with over-sized pistons and rings. These conditions are caused by cylinders which have become worn out-of-round and taper. To overcome these troubles, the cylinders must be reground.

FORD SPECIAL—Ford cylinders reground and fitted with oversize pistons, wrist pins, bushings and rings, complete, $16.00.

All work guaranteed. Prices reasonable.

ANNUAL REUNION OF OLD SETTLERS HELD AT HOUSTON

Settlers of Swede Bottoms Meet and Talk Over Old Days; Arrived 70 Years Ago

HOUSTON, Minn. — (Special.) — One of the most delightful reunions was held Friday of the old settlers of Swede Bottoms at the old Redding Mill on South Fork river on the farm of Mr. Nick Redding.

Seventy years ago, August 10, 1853, thirty people from Sweden walked from La Crosse and settled at this place, which they called Swede Bottom. Of the thirty, seven are now living, Nicholas Redding, Mrs. Blumgren of Chicago, Mrs. Hoyt of Jamestown, N. D., sisters of Mr. Redding, Ben Bensen, Mrs. John Sanders, Mrs. Nels Holms, sisters of Mr. Bensen, and Mrs. Cornelius Bensen, who were also present, and their many descendants enjoyed a most delightful time, telling of their interesting trip and of the early times.

Nick Redding Oldest

The oldest "boy" was Nick Redding, 82, and the youngest "girl" Mrs. Holms, 71. In spite of their advanced years they are all remarkably well and hearty. "Uncle Ben" will hold his own with any of the descendants, and has one of the largest and finest gardens here, which he has planted and taken care of during the summer. A sumptuous supper was surved during the afternoon.

Other Reunions

Two other reunions were held Sunday which had interest for our people, one the annual picnic of the employes of the Cargill & Falls Flour Mill that was destroyed by fire some twenty-three years ago. This was held at the tourist camping park west of town on Root river.

Many of the old employes have passed to the Great Beyond, others have moved away. Still there was a goodly number and their friends to enjoy the day. A sumptuous dinner was served at noon and recollections of the past were recalled in the afternoon. Miss Martha Berkland and Paul Abrahamson gave some interesting speeches.

Haugen Reunion

Very pleasant and enjoyable was the reunion of the Haugen families from La Crosse, Winona, Spring Valley, Houston and Haugle Ridge held at Riverside park in Winona. Over fifty enjoyed the day, which will long be remembered by them.

MRS. POSEY TELLS COAST CITIES OF SACRAMENTO'S FETE

Mrs. O. K. Posey of Sacramento, Cal., formerly Ella Hentschell of La Crosse who won national fame as "Miss '49" in the Sacramento celebration, "Days of '49," early this summer, is scoring a big hit in Spokane, Wash., and Portland, Ore., where she has appeared in the official costume of "Miss '49" before the Chamber of Commerce of both cities and addressed the members on the Sacramento historical event and the success that attended the celebration. Mrs. Posey left La Crosse a short time ago for her home in the west after being in this city for several months, being called here by the death of her father, William Hentschell. Mrs. Posey was accompanied on her trip home by her daughter La Vonne and her sister, Mrs. M. A. Hickisch. While in Spokane the sisters visited another sister, Mrs. M. T. Larkin.

ENTENTE IS DEAD CABLES GARDINER; FUTURE IN DARK

Coolidge Takes Office With World Abroad Never in Such Bad Shape

ENTENTE IS DEAD AND FRANCE STANDS ALONE

But British Moves are Menaced by French Bayonets

BY A. G. GARDINER
Britain's Greatest Liberal Editor
(Special Cable Dispatch to La Crosse Tribune)

LONDON.—Perhaps never before in the history of the United States has a new president faced such a maze of disconcerting events abroad as that which confronts Calvin Coolidge, the new executive of the American people. He takes office when the future of Europe is at the darkest pitch. Will America, under his tutelage, take a more active part in world affairs?

A. G. Gardiner.

This is a question which intrudes itself into any discussion or thought of the future. The entente is stone dead. Parliament never convened in such an atmosphere of gloom as pervaded Westminster Thursday. Indeed, not since the memorable August 3, 1914, has a statement from the treasury bench created such a somber impression on the country as that caused by the speeches by Prime Minister Baldwin and Foreign Secretary Curzon. They disclosed the complete failure of Baldwin's efforts to induce Poincare to agree to a joint allied reply to the German offer of June 7. A few hours later came the tragic news of the death of Mr. Harding. There was no analogy between the two, save common misfortune and the possible effect on future events.

French Obdurate

The character of the negotiations between the French and British has not been disclosed for Baldwin has not published the documents. But his significant statement that France failed to reply to the British draft of the proposed allied reply to Germany has created an unpleasant feeling.

What follows? First, the entente is gone. Poincare no longer needs it and is confident of his power to defy all opposition and to pursue singlehanded the policy of breaking up Germany. His delaying action has succeeded in preventing for two months any reply from the allies to Germany. In that interval, disintegration in Germany has advanced by leaps and bounds and anarchy is imminent.

It is not clear from Baldwin's statement what this next step will be. He spoke vaguely of the continuation of negotiations with France but it is universally realized that this is mere temporizing. Moreover, it is dangerous temporizing, for the longer England fails to give a definite lead the more feeble becomes her position. Baldwin's situation is desperately difficult.

Driven by "Die-Hards"

A large section of the conservative "die-hards," under the daily frenzy of the Harmsworth press, is flogging him from behind to accept dictation from Poincare and to join in crushing Germany. If he takes strong action to the contrary it is conceivable that he may be unpoised by these wild men. His own views, clear and decisive, are that the French policy in ruining Europe will ruin France, too. His chief support comes not from his own ranks but from the trading community and the opposition leaders.

Will he have the courage to reply to Germany separately, accepting the proposed international inquiry into reparations? That is his own wish. In such a course he is assured of the friendly attitude of Italy and in a large measure, Belgian sympathy. How far, however, Belgium will venture to assume the appearance of antagonizing France is doubtful.

Means French Enmity

One is bound to face the fact that a friendly reply to the German government will be the final nailed coffin of Anglo-French negotiations. But the alternative is unthinkable. It would mean that England, as a political influence on the fate of Europe, is dead and that her own commercial existence would be destroyed beyond recovery.

Assuming that Baldwin replies, accepting the inquiry, momentous developments will follow. Poincare will refuse to take part in such an inquiry. He has got his teeth in Germany and he will not suffer inquiry nor interference. But the new policy would be launched and would focus all enlightened thought in Europe. Until such a step is taken there is no possibility of stopping the drift on the continent toward universal anarchy. Would America approve such an inquiry?

The proposal was originally made by the American secretary of state and if endorsed by American opinion the moral effect on the situation would be overwhelming.

Meanwhile, the sinister turn of events brings grave problems to the front. What in the new situation ought to be done with the British troops in Cologne? Ever since the Ruhr discord began their position has been equivocal and humiliating. With the present tendency, that position may conceivably become dangerous. Their continued presence long has been resented by the French who regard them as an obstacle to their aggressive plans. If the breach widens it is not improbable that Poincare will demand their withdrawal. Such a course would profoundly embitter the feeling and place the British government in grave difficulty. Imagine the resentment flowing from the spectacle of the British army, which spent a million lives on French battlefields, being ordered out of the Rhineland by the French government.

Will the league of nations survive the dissolution of the entente? France has always been contemptuous, and if Germany is admitted to the league probably will seize the opportunity to withdraw and rely ostentatiously on her supremacy in bayonets.

These are questions that darken our sky today.
